As I See It

by June Bierbower

Warren Alfson was responsible for one of the prettiest plays of Saturday's football game when he grabbed Walt Luther's fumble and nearly broke away to a touchdown.

Alfson, a guard who has at times played in the backfield, had pulled out of the line to block for Luther when the latter fumbled the ball. With hardly a break in his stride Alfson gathered in the ball, and ran, not lumbered like an ordinary lineman, 23 yards to set up the pins for Vike Francis' winning place kick.

Bob Luther's pass interception tactics—he pulled down three of 'em Saturday, made one ex-Husker athlete look good...he's been touting Luther as another Lloyd Cardwell when it comes to pass defense ever since last fall... Luther nearly intercepted a fourth but he couldn't quite hang on to it...and wouldn't it have been funny (at the time) if Hermie Rohrig had missed the try for extra point...Rohrig's grand entrance in his warmup suit with his team one point behind put some old fashioned drummer into the game.

HELEN KOVANDA

"At least you've got something... that is, when you work a problem in calculus," says Helen Kovanda, Gamma Phi Beta secretary, who has traveled a long way from the back lot football team in her home town, Elk Creek, to a math major in teachers college. Just back from the national WAA convention in Berkeley, California, Helen, as WAA president, brought more ideas about organizing sports groups. As though one activity weren't enough, Helen has time for the Y. W. C. A. cabinet, Coed Counselors, and Tassels. She takes time off from sports as fishing in Minnesota in the summer... basketball, baseball, and horse-back riding... to spend a lot of time dancing with Lynn Myers. You may be living as full a schedule as Helen, too, but you'll have a lot more ambition to keep going if you take time out at the COLUMBIA, Mo. April 24.—Meeting a stronger pitcher in Carl Miles, the Husker baseball team dropped a 2-1 decision to the Missouri nine in the first of a two game Nebraska-Missouri series at Columbia yesterday.

Lloyd Schmadeke defending the mound for the Huskers, held the Tigers to four hits. A triple by Paul Christman was the only extra base hit scored off the Nebraska ball thrower.
