225 schools now giving marriage training courses

225 colleges are now giving courses in training for marriage, it was declared in a recent issue of the Look magazine by Dr. Ernest R. Groves of the University of North Carolina. He pioneered his first class in 1927 when the students petitioned the faculty for such a course to help prepare them for marriage.

"Child marriages recently have shocked all America," declared Dr. Groves in his article, "but marriages of many older persons are as pitiful and absurd. Because parents often cannot or will not tell young people what they must know, colleges are now offering the honest, useful information that fitness for marriage requires of modern youth."

Dr. Groves' article is accompanied by pictures showing classes, mixed and unmixed, at his own school as well as others. The considered revolutionary 16 years ago, the course is now treated like any other subject by many institutions of learning. Dr. Groves stated, instruction includes information about courtship, engagement, finances, marital adjustment, conception, and pregnancy. He believes the most important quality for a successful marriage is the desire for a home and children.

According to Dr. R. D. Lyman, there is no such comprehensive course given at Nebraska although there is a course in Social Hygiene.

The University of Detroit will again this year sponsor the national intercollegiate turtle race. The Nicholas Murray Butler permanent intercollegiate philatelic trophy has been won by a Brown university student.
