

Voters pass street extension

2 to 1 vote joins capitol, university

City to maintain mill levy 10 years for improvement program

Polling a 2 to 1 majority in favor of the proposed amendment maintaining the present 3-4 mill levy, the voters of Lincoln expressed themselves in favor of the widening of 15th street from K to R, and the construction of a new city auditorium.

Final results of the 85 precincts voting, showed 8,024 favoring the improvements to a total of 3,842 in opposition. Work will get under way as soon as property rights may be obtained.

The funds which formerly have gone for sewer construction will be diverted, by the maintenance of the present levy, for the next ten year period into the construction of the suggested improvements.

By pushing back the curbs and extending Noth 15th, the first of a series of improvements planned years ago will get under way. Eventually it is hoped that similar boulevards will connect the capitol with the Veterans hospital to the east, and highway 6 to the west.

The city auditorium long needed by Lincoln residents for operas, plays and guest speakers coming to Lincoln will be made available along with the road project at an estimated cost of about $750,000 less the amount of interest on borrowed money.

Arts carnival set to open

Work of advanced art students to go on sale

A Fine Arts carnival, sponsored by Delta Phi Delta, starts at 7:30 tomorrow evening. This carnival, or Wah Wah, is the object of all the brightly painted signs appearing on the campus this morning. Held on the second floor of Morrill, the Wah Wah will run long enough so that persons attending other events of the evening may also attend it.

Admission is free. Work of the advanced art students will be on sale and portraits and caricatures will be drawn for a dime.

Live horses will race in Gallery B. Betting is allowed and prizes will be given to those selecting the winners.

An idea of Wah-Wahism may be gained by visiting the collection of it that is now appearing in the corridors of the art department in Morrill.
