Kansas nine faces Huskers today

Nebraska to dedicate new baseball diamond

Lloyd Schmadeke to hurl against Cliff Brass in opener of two-game series starting at 4

Nebraska opens its home baseball season this afternoon on the new varsity diamond northwest of the coliseum at 4 as the Huskers go against Kansas U. in the first of a two-game series. Second game is scheduled for 2 Saturday afternoon.

The new field is to be dedicated just before this afternoon's game, to which admission is free. Activity tickets, however, will be required for admission Saturday.

The Jayhawks, who have won two and lost three, are in fourth place in the conference, while the Huskers, with four defeats, are in the Big Six cellar, and will be seeking their first league win of the season.

Loss to Wildcats.

Kansas dropped their first Big Six game to Kansas State, was rained out of the second against the Wildcats, defeated Iowa State in two games last weekend, then took a double defeat from Oklahoma at Norman Monday and Tuesday.

The Huskers, who lost seven of eight games on a barnstorming trip to the west, have beaten only California. They were rained out of their conference opener, a two game series here against Iowa State, and have dropped two each to Missouri and Kansas State.

Schmadeke to pitch.

Pitching for the Huskers this afternoon will be Lloyd Schmadeke, senior right hander from Bradish who pitched Nebraska to their victory over California. Rube Denning, another senior, will be on the mound Saturday.

Cliff Brass, veteran Jayhawk hurler, will open this afternoon for Kansas, while John Burge, sophomore football end, will probably pitch Saturday, with Red Dugan being held in reserve. Brass and Burge pitched the Jays to their double victory over Iowa State.

Cadwallader plays.

Names familiar to Nebraskans on the K. U. lineup are those of Eldred Cadwallader, right field, who scored a touchdown, then fumbled to give Nebraska their chance to beat K. U. on the gridiron last fall, and Les Kappleman, fine shortstop, who was sports editor of the Daily Kansan last semester as well as a member of the basketball team. Ed Hall, catcher, and Frank Bukaty, third baseman, both backfield men in football.

Harlan Muth, Seward, will take over the first base spot of the Huskers.

St. Paul league to stage banquet

World's Fair theme set for Friday event

The world's fair theme will be woven through the St. Paul M. E. Epworth league's annual spring banquet this Friday evening. Mark Simon, Lincoln lawyer and former league president, will speak on the "Temple of Religion" in conformity to the theme.

Toastmaster will be Delbert Christensen and toasts will be given on the "Hall of Fashion" by Beula Brigham, the "House of Man" by John Norall and the "Hall of Jewels" by Ellsworth Steele. The trylon and perisphere will serve as decoration motifs. Helen Eighthy is program chairman, Marie Larrabee arrangements, and Lilah Jensen decorations. The banquet will begin at 6:30 o'clock and will be at the church.

A "Georgia Garden Center" has been established on the University of Georgia campus.

As I See It by June Bierbower

Three cheers and a couple of hurrahs for John Bentley whose comments in last night's Journal about Jack Marsee, the Oklahoma jitterbug, jibe (not a pun on jive) with our opinion.

Marsee, a freshman football star, is getting quite a bit of attention down at Norman because he's one grand jitterbugger. No one's objecting—in fact, they seem to think he's cute, judging from a press release coming from the Sooner publicity office.

But, as Bentley says, wait until Oklahoma loses a few games. That sort of thing is—jitterbugism, for instance—"interesting" when a team wins—but it's suicide when a team loses, as witness goings on last fall.

For quite some time this Oklahoma business has puzzled us. Mr. Harold Keith, a very capable gentleman, directs Oklahoma publicity, and he seems to have the old knack of giving people what they want—at least what they want from a winning team.

Witness the pictures of Oklahoma athletes. Seldom do you see an ordinary picture—but one of some musclemen with a fair coed hanging on his arm, or soothing his wounds, or just adoring him.

And funny thing about it, that one Mr. Fred Ware, who is periodically taunts the jitterbug-minded Huskers, decorates his sport pages with those very pictures, without as much as giving them a word of comment in his column.

Not that we're telling Ware how to run his business—he does fine by himself—or objecting to the pictures, because they ARE interesting. A pretty girl always brightens things up, and if the Sooner news service and the press associations send out such things, they might as well be used.

But, tho they do liven up the sport pages, the fact remains that along about last fall what did we

Huskers to leave for triangular meet against K-State, KU

Pick Hackney, Wibbels, Simmons to be stars

Nebraska's track team, 20 strong, will leave tomorrow morning for Manhattan, Kas., where they will face Kansas State college and Kansas U. in a triangular meet tomorrow afternoon.

The meet will bring together a number of the midwest's greatest stars as Hackney and Mitchell of Kansas State; Wibbels and Simmons of Nebraska, and Stoland, Bird, and Harris of Kansas lead their teams into action. Nebraska has lost to both see but a picture of Howard McCarty with a lovely gal congratulating him on the touchdown he made against Rice—and then, about two weeks later, a blazing denunciation for the Huskers because of jitterbugism. Then came that series of photos of O. U. players at Miami for the Orange Bowl game—in which the boys looked like escort service employees.

It all goes to show what winning a few games will do. Would we have ever heard the end of it if there'd been any pictures of some handsome Husker grinner making eyes at a beauty queen last fall or now, for that matter?
