

First day of school finds freshmen hitting books, coking in 'Corn Crib', reading Nebraskan, and getting in swing of college life

When freshmen enter college, everyone likes to watch them. The on-looker may not know it, but their gawking is more obvious than the freshman gawking. The NEBRASKAN pays tribute to the class of '43 on this special page of pictures, showing activities of the class' first day of school.

Top right, three lads take time out to loaf in the grill room or "Corn Crib" in the Union. Left to right they are Duke Scatz and George Thompson of Omaha and Homer Barton of Lincoln.

Left is Marion Lydick, Valley sophomore, who really isn't studying the first day of school, but who looks as if she liked it.

The caps on some of the male heads in the picture are red freshman caps, worn by ALL male freshmen until the homecoming tug-of-war with the sophomores, or until the first snow-fall. In the last picture, Mr. Schatz proves he knows where to find information, as he gazes intently at the NEBRASKAN front page.

Union holds first matinee

Wednesday afternoon social great success

The first matinee dance of this year's Student Union social program held last Wednesday afternoon was a splendid success, according to Miss Nadine Nims of Director Van Sant's office.

"Throughout the rest of the year," she added, "the Union will continue to sponsor matinee dances every Wednesday afternoon from 5 to 6."

The purpose of these dances, which are held in the Union's ballroom, is to encourage social intercourse among the students enrolled in the university. Recorded music is used for the afternoon affairs and admission is free.

"All students are welcome at the matinees," says Miss Nims, "and are invited to attend as many as they can."

"However," she warned, "all students attending, especially the boys, should remember that altho the dances are informal they are not 'hard times' events. Preferably coats and ties should be worn by the boys attending, rather than old sweaters and sweatshirts."

The Student Union regulations concerning social functions held at the Union are given below:

All men must wear suit coats and ties to week end dances in the Student Union.

Students attending matinee dances may come dressed as they were in class.
