Wings Over Nebraska U.

About 30 students, two of whom are girls, at N. U. have applied and are beginning actual flying instruction.

The course is planned to teach a number of college students how to fly reasonably well. There are absolutely no military obligations involved. The course is designed to provide trained flyers who may volunteer for service in the war we hope will never come.

With civilization advancing at the present rate, the time is not far off when practically everyone will know how to fly. Nebraska graduates will be prepared to teach flying if they are unable to get a position in their major field. Often during disasters trained pilots are in demand. Graduates of this flying course will be able to take advantage of the thrill aviation offers in their later years.

Nebraska is definitely air-minded. Hundreds of students go every Sunday to the local airports to watch the planes and ride in them. With 30 students to fill the campus air with flying slang, more interest will undoubtedly be shown. More power to Nebraska in its march with progress!

title of Star Farmer of America for his agricultural program which netted him $1,296.45 for the past year.

Before a large audience which included hundreds of farm youths, 4-H club members and Future Farmers of America, all in Kansas City for the livestock show, the 18 year old Loretto youth received the coveted award.

Norman and his brother, Marvin Kruse, now a college junior, entered 4-H club work five years ago, taking vocational agriculture in high school. Norman is also a violinist and took part in high school glee club and dramatics.

Livestock his specialty.

Kruse specializes in livestock. Starting with a single cow, he has built a stock of 40 hogs, 8 cattle and 17 sheep.

The boys' father has co-operated with his sons but has allowed them to use their own ideas.

"I thought it would be better," he said, "for the boys to profit by their own mistakes. And they have proven to me several times that some of my methods are wrong."

Norman has these fundamental rules for raising livestock: Raise purebred stock—this is of paramount importance; feed home-grown balanced rations; keep conditions sanitary.

Net profit for the past year was four times his net for the previous year.

bucket compared to the total British shipping) Nor, as yet, is there any real war enthusiasm, or bitterness, or unity.

But significant is the fact, the casualties in the past few days have been slight, that now, for the first time, British and French and German soldiers are dying, supposedly an honorable death in the defense of the homeland, and that they have leave behind them thousands who mourn them, who are deprived of their means of livelihood, who are bitter towards the ones responsible for the soldiers' death.

Cause for war.

It is axiomatic that when air raids become frequent, when citizens are killed, either as civilians or soldiers, there will arise in each nation a popular demand for the continuance of the war, and likewise a demand after the war is won, for the vanquished to be severely punished. Weeping mothers and hungry children are the best reasons for continuing wars, and also provide causes for future wars.

The developments today foretell the end of efforts for peace, and the beginning of war in earnest. That is why America should not be foolish enough to help either side. For should Americans lend their arms, their moneys, their resources, for the prosecution of war in Europe, then surely the opposite side will be able to justify any action against Amer-

Scrap Irony

Chris Peterson

I'll put my imaginative family up against that of Bob Burns any day. Take my cousin for instance.

Now that I look back and think how sincere he was about everything, moisture creeps into my eyes. His sincerity killed him. He was a butcher and he put his heart into his work.

He was afflicted too. Kleptomaniac. But I cured him. I took him to a flea circus.

His wife or I should say widow, is odd. I gave her some beautiful underwear last Christmas. She put them away for a windy day!

But he was a great guy. Anything for a laugh, that was him, even if it came to looking at his face in the mirror. But at the same time, that kind of cast a reflection upon the rest of the family.

I couldn't decide whether he was smart or dumb. He was the one who advanced the theory that the white lines in the middle of the modern highways are traffic lanes for bicycles.

Then on the other hand he used to come out with quickies like this one: "A shoulder strap is a piece of ribbon used to keep an attraction from becoming a sensation."

The family disowned him right after he was kicked out of college. He saw a sign "Murderer wanted" and applied for the job!

Frosh stage pep drill tomorrow

To teach freshmen the traditional songs and yells of the university, Innocents and Mortar Boards will sponsor the second in the series of freshmen yell practices tomorrow afternoon at 5 in the Union ballroom.

Corn Cobs and Tassels will assist Roy Profitt, yell king, and his squad of cheer leaders lead the songs and cheers for the assembled freshmen.

Since the best planned rallies and football demonstrations can be spoiled if a group of students do not know the songs and yells, the sponsors of the meeting urge that all freshmen turn out for the practice.

ica, whether that sinking of American ships, sabotage in American factories, of vigorous anti-American propaganda campaign.

And similarly, with these actions Americans too will become bitter, Americans too will demand retaliatory actions, reprisals, till bitterness on both sides is so intensified that there is a popular demand on both sides for war.

The single answer is, if we sincerely desire to stay out of war, if we sincerely desire to be impartial, that we refuse to aid either. And if from no other reason than self interest, in the absence of any sense of humanitarianism, we should remain inside our shell. We should tell both sides that they are aggressors, we should ask for reasons and not sarcasm in reply to speeches by men like Lindbergh, we should, in short, tell both sides to go to the devil.
