Editorially Speaking
... Et Al

"The University of Nebraska is operated on funds appropriated every two years by the state legislature." Of course, you say, everyone knows that.

If some malevolent power were to spirit away all of the services and equipment thus obtained, the resulting holes would be almost as alarming as those which haunt Mr. Grover Whalen's nightmares when he thinks what would happen to his fair if all of the war-torn European powers should withdraw their exhibits next year.

Most obvious loss, of course, would be such PWAided improvements as the Student Union, the new dormitories, and the new athletic fields. Next might be the not inconsiderable annual contribution of the federal government on behalf of N.U.'s compulsory military training in accordance with the provisions of the Morrill Land Grant Act.

Now let us turn to some of the less conspicuous but none the less worthy adornments which such an imaginary catastrophe would eliminate. The Student Union has just received a $1,400 present from the Carnegie Corporation of New York in the form of an expensive electrical phonograph, some 600 records, and other valuable musical accessories designed for better student appreciation.

The university's air course, one of the most progressive additions to the curriculum in some time, is sponsored by the Civil Aeronautics Authority which has appropriated some four millions of dollars for instruction in various U.S. colleges and universities.

which one is supposed to gain in a great university comes from hearing noted lecturers and artists. The University of Nebraska's own programs along this line are supplemented by such series as those sponsored by the Lincoln Symphony Orchestra association, the Lincoln Junior League Town Hall, and the Nebraska Art association, which organizations offer students special low rates to enjoy their offerings.

Many scholarships are awarded each year—both to those entering the university and those attending it—by philanthropic groups not directly connected with the school. Some 40 N.U. alumni groups located in major centers throughout the country are working on a plan now to finance various worthy university projects ranging from $25 to $1,000.

Although this list makes no representations of being complete, it is imposing enough to make one realize the many benefits blown our way by elements other than the legislature. In these times of drought and depression in the state, their presence is especially important in maintaining the university's position as a center of learning.

In the opinion of many persons, Nebraska needs further expansion along these lines in order that she may become even less dependent upon legislative appropriations for subsistence. It was with this end in view that the University of Nebraska Foundation was set up and the alumni association was reorganized along more vigorous lines.

to attend all forums. At the next meeting, which the council voted to hold next Wednesday to discuss election plans, a sophomore member of the publications board will be elected to fill the vacancy.

a high old time. Most people in the mountains do. Say you'll be mine, dearest. Children? Well, why bring those up?" Marjorie Adams, Teachers sophomore.

Betty Joe Koehler, Arts and sciences junior. I wouldn't like the week-kneed type. I want my man to be determined; as if he meant it. However, he has to do it romantically, say about 1 o'clock in the morning.

Helen Gartner, Ag college sophomore. This real serious stuff is absolutely out. If there's a moon, stars, lake, and of course the right man, he wouldn't have to say much.

Jo Wray, Teachers junior. I'm rather old fashioned about such stuff I guess, so I want him to do it sort of formally. He wouldn't have to get on bended knee, but the rest of it would have to resemble daddy's proposal to mother.

Conclave— (Continued from page 1.) Roland L. Edie, Hebron, presiding. Primary and elementary school principals meet today at 2 p. m. The rural division meeting will be held in the Everett junior high school auditorium at the same time.

cream—giving them an average placing of eleventh in the entire contest. Individually, Loren Zook of Lincoln placed sixth on butter and fourth on cheese—while Alvin Rippen of Bladen placed seventh on butter.

4-H men champions. Donald Tracy and Gordon McNeal of York county, representing Nebraska 4-H clubs in the national dairy production demonstration contest, were crowned champions in their division.
