

Luther averages 4.31 yards to lead Nebraska ball toters

Butch Luther, Cambridge's pride and joy, is leading Husker ball carriers in yards gained per try, having averaged 4.31 yards net each of the 35 times he has carried the ball in seven games to date. Only gains from scrimmage are counted and yards taken away by penalties are not included. Luther has netted 151 yards.

Bob DeFruiter, who understudies Luther, has a 4.07 average, compiled in six games. He has netted 57 yards in 14 tries.

Hopp work horse.
Harry Hopp has gained the most yardage, having a net of 290 yards. He has gained 341, but lost 51, some of them on losses incurred when he failed to find pass receivers. Hopp's average is 3.77, he having carried the ball more often than any other Husker—77 times. Hank Rohn has toted the ball 28 times in five games for an 89 aggregate, and a 3.18 average. Vike Francis pulled himself over the 3 yard mark last Saturday as he averaged nearly five yards a crack, and has a 3.03 mark. He has netted 103 yards in 34 attempts in six games, and has lost only one yard.

Dobson doesn't lose
Adna Dobson hasn't lost a yard, having toted the ball 16 times in five games for 35 yards, and a 2.19 average. Hermie Rohrig, the Huskers' leading scorer, has only a 1.03 average. He has netted 78 yards, having lost 100 against total gains of 178. Hermie has been spilled in attempting to pass to account for most of the losses. Rohrig has 28 points, and Luther has 24 as the two lead Husker point makers. Rohrig's gains on punt returns, which have been instrumental in putting the Huskers in scoring position often, are not included in gains from scrimmage.

Rohrig and Hopp have done all the Husker passing and Hermie has a neat mark of 18 completions, 3 touchdowns, and 229 yards gained in 37 tries. Three of his passes have been intercepted, and 16 have been incomplete. Hopp has completed 3 of 21, and his tosses have made 52 yards. Three have been intercepted.

Nebraska teams have won but one Pittsburgh game

By Harl Hunt.
With high hopes of bagging their first victory since 1921, Nebraska's Cornhuskers entrained last night to meet the Pitt Panther, a Panther shorn of its usually potent claws by numerous injuries.

Not since Fred Dawson's great crew of '21 handed Pitt a 10-0 setback in the first clash of the two teams have the lads from Cornhuskerland managed to hoist the victory pennant.

In this well-remembered battle, the Scarlet penetrated the Panther lair with tiring regularity, but not until late in the second quarter when Chick Hartley heaved a long pass to Clarence Swanson, did the Huskers score. Pete Preston kicked the extra point to give Nebraska a 7-0 margin at intermission, and then came back in the second half to kick a field goal from the 12 yard line.

In 1937 the Cornhuskers were given the greatest chance of stemming the tide of Pittsburgh wins. The Nebraskans were leading 7-6 late in the final quarter of the game, but Bill Anderson's fumble on the 33-yard line paved the way for the second Pitt touchdown. Steve Petro recovered, and aided by Harold Stebbins' 20-yard run, the Panthers drove to the Husker one yard line. Burly Bill Stapulis crashed over to give Pittsburgh a 13-7 decision.

In last year's fray, the Pitt Powerhouse paid a visit to Memorial stadium and all but blasted Nebraska off the field for a 19-0 shutout. The Panther scoring machine, although minus the services of Marshall Goldberg, shifted into high gear and completely outplayed the Huskers in every department with their straight, bruising football tactics.

a full page spread in the book instead of the usual half page. The only requirements are that every organization that sponsors a girl must purchase 20 copies of the 1940 annual. The purchases may be either paid for in full or taken out on the down payment plan.

Brown ink on ivory paper.
In harmony with the theme "Ten years, the end of an old decade and the start of a new," several innovations will be introduced in the annual. For the first time in any institution, the entire annual will be printed in brown ink on ivory paper. Brown was selected to give warmth and clarity to the illustrations. A specially prepared shade of red ink will be used as the secondary color.

"Memo on 1940" the opening section of the book, will contain pictures of the years most important events. In addition, this section will contain pictures of the "types" found on the campus.

Cornhusker classifications.
Cornhusker classification of these types is divided into "thinkers," honor students; "doers," activity leaders; "mentors," professors; "lobbies," politicians; "muscles," athletes; and "society," the "smoothies."

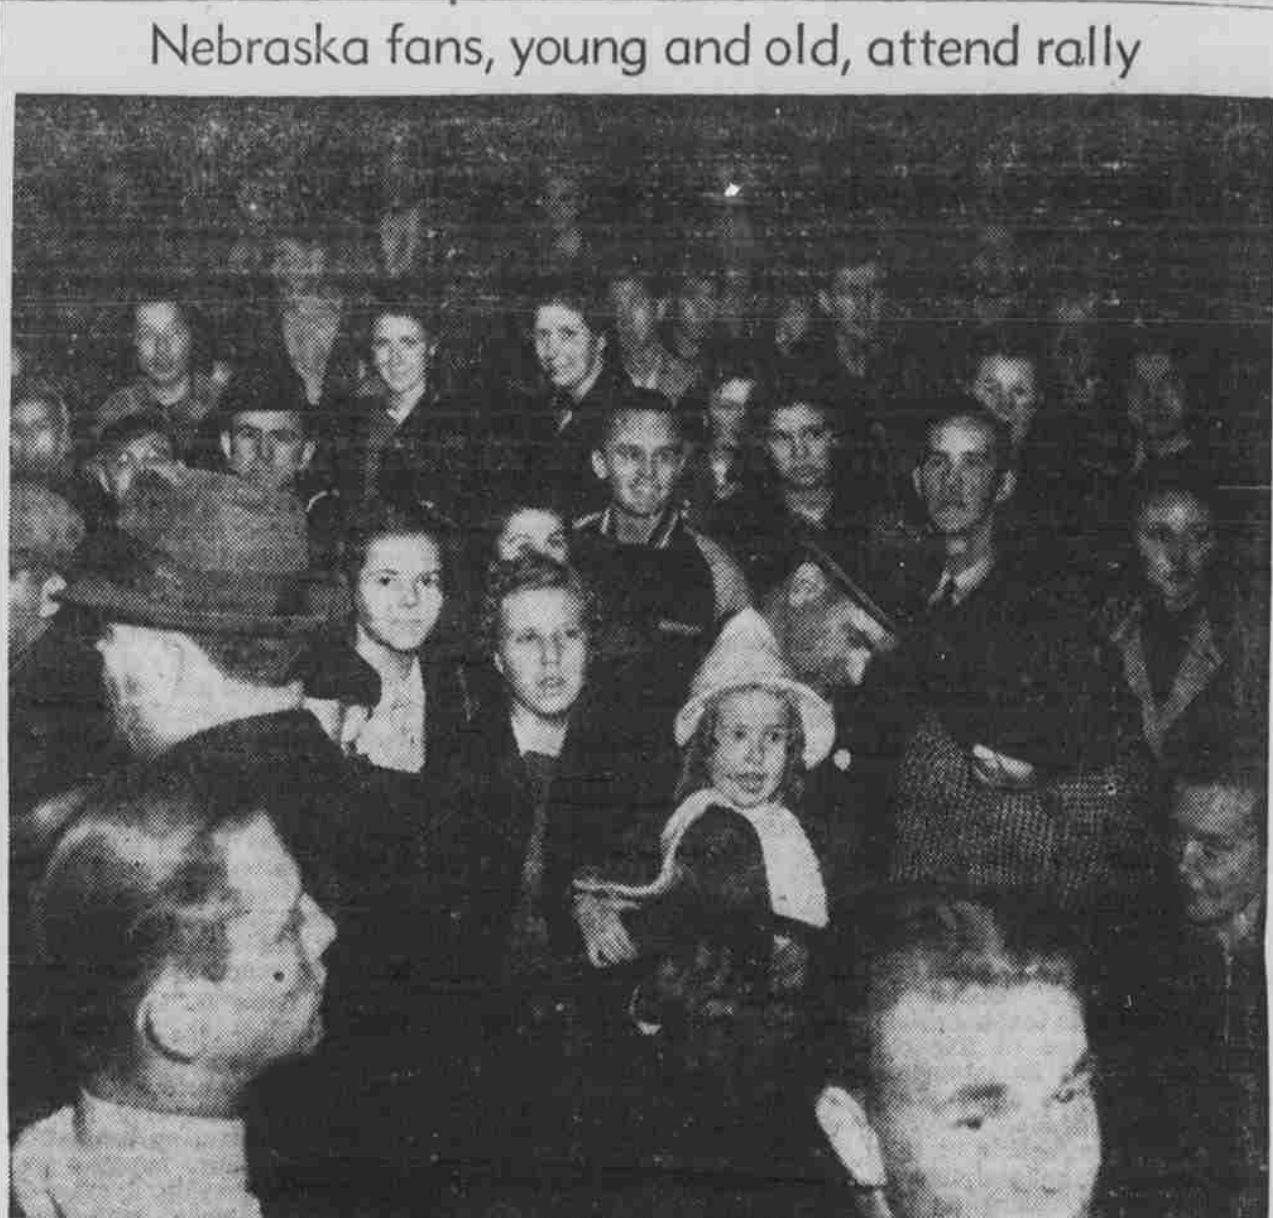

An entire section will be devoted to candid photos entitled "campus views." All of the photos will be reproduced in large size, eliminating the extremely small candid photos of the past. Pictures for this section will be taken by the newly appointed staff proto-

HERE'S A SEA OF FACES at the football rally at the Burlington depot Wednesday night. Note particularly the youngest rooter, the golden haired little girl, hanging onto the rope in the center. —Journal and Star.

By June Bierbower.

Tomorrow both Pittsburgh and Nebraska are in a spot to come thru with a blazing performance and win a football game. We've a hunch that one or the other is coming thru with the best exhibition of football they've seen for a time, to win a well-won victory.

Which team? We can tell you all about that Saturday night. The Huskers are about due, altho they may not come thru until the Oklahoma game. Pitt looked good enough against Carnegie Tech, and the Panthers may just be hitting their stride, who knows? If they do—well, it may take the Huskers more than a few bomb-proof cellars to escape unscathed.

The Husker's haven't been overly-influenced by the bear dope emanating from the Panther camp, because Pitt usually manages to field at least 11 men who can stand on both legs.

Anyone who saw Dick Cassiano play here last year knows that even if Pitt's punting is uncertain, Cassiano isn't. His passing this year, too, looks as good as his running, and he's still a flashy runner, even if he doesn't have John Chickeneo mopping up ahead for him.

There's a story that Pitt may gamble on long passes into the end zone instead of punts. We doubt that it will come to that, altho any boy who can sling a pass 55 yards in the air as did Edgar Jones for that touchdown against Carnegie Tech Saturday, might do it.

The Huskers let KU grab two long passes behind them against Kansas, even the KU didn't get touchdowns. That could prove fatal against Pitt, because it's a cinch the Panthers are better at converting scoring opportunities than the Jayhawks. And Nebraska can't fumble twice in the first quarter and come out of it with only a few teeth-chatters.

We'll admit that the wish is at least step-father to the thought in this case, and pick the Huskers to win, tho for the simple reason that we think they'll find their alertness and offensive spark again. We'd feel lots safer in picking them if they weren't playing the Sooners next week end, but be that as it may, we think the "good old Husker line" and a few backs will give the Panthers their third licking of the season.

but there is also a large group that believes college is the place to train both "knowers" and "doers." The results of the poll are:

- COLLEGE EDUCATION SHOULD—
- Be mainly technical and professional17 per cent
 - Emphasize a wide cultural background46 per cent
 - Include both37 per cent

Sentiment for professional training is least popular with New England students (7%), and most in favor with Far Westerners (24%). All other sections of the country agree almost exactly with national student opinion as shown above.
