

Cagers open with 39-15 win over Coyotes

By June Bierbower.

Probably the most significant meaning of the college sports editors' all star football team presented in today's DAILY, is that it shows collich writers read the papers.

The boys who made the team, almost without exception, are players who received lots of publicity in early or midseason, and since the ballots were mailed to Bob Kunkel in Montana before the last week in November, we poor eds didn't get to see many all star teams before balloting. So the fellows with good publicity agents—the ones you read most about this year, are the guys who made the team.

It probably isn't so bad at that. In fact, all the players on it have made one or more teams, and most of them have been on a major share of the all teams.

In case you're interested, our ballot agreed with the final first team selections in seven places as we picked Kavanaugh, Boyd, Smith, Suffridge, Drahos, Harmon and Kinnick. Washington and Kimbrough were in our backfield, Wenzel of Tulane at one end, and Schleichl at center. Yes, we picked the boys about whom we had read the most, too. Our nominations from the Husker team were Rohrig, Seemann and Alifson—the editors couldn't vote for players from their own school on the two teams they submitted. Seemann's captaincy of the eighth team, which, by the way, had Brock of Purdue, Ison of Georgia Tech, Sommers of UCLA, and Bergner of Navy, meant that the Omahan got more votes than any man selected on that team.

Jack "Monk" Meyer, who has been serving as a student manager for the Husker gridgers, is going to give football a fling come spring practice.

Meyer, who is in his fourth year in school here, went to Omaha Central, but had always been too light to play football until now. He weighs around 175, and the Biffer had him doing the passing against the varsity before the Kansas game and some of the sideliners who saw him said he was the best long passer on the field. He'll have lots of competition out there next spring, but says if he gets anywhere he'll stay around next fall to play.

It's now certain that the Huskers had an invitation to the Cotton Bowl game, Biff Jones having divulged the fact at Kansas City. However, the Huskers didn't get their invitation until after Oklahoma had turned down their bid, and in view of that, and the fact that Nebraska's athletic council is opposed to bowl game participation for the Huskers, Jones didn't even bother to present the bid to the athletic board of control.

Why the Sooners should be asked before the Huskers may be a question, but it was probably because the boys who did the asking thought Oklahoma would fall in line with their bowl ideas sooner than Nebraska—not because they thought the Sooners were better (pardon that one) than Nebraska. But the Sooners fooled 'em, too—the Orange Bowl having taught them a little lesson.

Second half rally brings victory

Nebraska wore down South Dakota's Coyotes in the second half last night to come through to an easy 39-15 win in the opening game of the season for both teams.

Rube Hoy's team, playing without a substitute throughout more than the first half, held the Huskers to a 12-10 lead at half-time, but Nebraska with Al Randall leading the way, ran away from their tiring opponents as they rolled up another dozen points in the first seven minutes of play, and coasted from there. The Coyotes, who couldn't penetrate the Husker defense, relied to a great extent on shots from around the foul circle, and could not score a point during the first 16½ minutes of the second half, substitute forward Albertson finally breaking the scoring ice with the Coyotes' first goal of the second half after the Huskers had poured in thirty-four.

First half slow

The first half, although close, was ragged and slow, with the only excitement coming as the South Dakotans' matinee idol forward Quentin Evers poured in three nice baskets to keep his team in the running.

Browne started Harry Pitcaithley, Bud Tallman, Al Randall, Don Fitz and Charley Vacanti in the second half, and it was this team, sparked by Randall and Fitz, which pulled the Huskers out ahead. Randall, who was held scoreless in the first half, went on a basket-making spree, and piled up eleven points before he was removed in the latter stages of the game. Irv Yaffe, although troubled with sore feet, took over the Husker scoring after Randall, getting seven points in short order.

Fitz starred

Don Fitz, Husker guard, who got eight points, played the best game of the evening, while Charley Vacanti, sophomore guard, looked good.

Twenty-five men saw service in the game, thirteen of them Huskers. Browne used eleven men in the first half as against the five iron men of the Coyotes—Snider, Evers, Ptak, Taplett and Cadwell, and the pace began to tell after the intermission.

A grand total of thirty-two free shots were missed—sixteen on each side. One came as forward Snider of the visitors held the ball too long as he stood to shoot and it went to the Huskers out of bounds. Guard Bob Taplett of South Dakota missed seven free throws alone, and didn't make one.

Snider and his substitute, Jacobson, were both removed on fouls in the second half. Randall, Fitz and Yaffe led the Husker scoring while Evers' six was best for the visitors.

340 attend luncheon at grid rally

Junior C of C stages fourth annual program for prep athletes

Gridiron stars, coaches and superintendents from 69 schools in Nebraska were in Lincoln Friday attending the fourth annual state football rally and broke the all time attendance record of the event. The rally, sponsored by the junior chamber of commerce brought over 340 persons to the chamber luncheon which started the day's program of fun.

The prep gridsters received a taste of college spirit and rubbed elbows with varsity stars of Nebraska and Wesleyan. They helped pay tribute to the graduating seniors of both schools' squads, heard coaching staff members from the schools, and were introduced, and presented with awards, by John Bentley, sports editor of the Journal.

Glee club sings

The university glee club marched into the room during the luncheon singing "There is No Place Like Nebraska" and W. G. Tempel soon had the whole group joined in the singing. Tassels Antoinette Skoda, Pat Prime and Lois Baker pinned carnations on the visiting coaches.

Biff Jones, unable to attend, sent a telegram of best wishes from Kansas City. The rally, Jones said, was a highlight of the university season and he deeply regretted being unable to attend.

Nebraska Sweetheart Beth Howley and Dorothy Knight, Wesleyan's "W" club sweetheart were introduced to the visitors. Dwight Thomas, Wesleyan coach, and Harold Browne, Nebraska coach, introduced members of the coaching staffs.

Bentley presents awards

John Bentley presented the senior members of the two squads with awards at the luncheon. A guest at the luncheon was Ted Doyle, formerly a Husker star and now a member of the Pitt Pirates pro team.

After the luncheon the guests visited both campuses, Nebraska and Wesleyan. In the afternoon they were guests of the Nebraska athletic department and had exhibitions and demonstrations in a number of sports presented to them. Later they were entertained at a dinner and stag party in the Union.

Big Six track meet comes to NU

Spring carnival returns to Lincoln after year's absence

The annual Big Six track meet returns to Nebraska U after an absence of a year, as the carnival was set to be held in Memorial stadium here May 17 and 18.

The meet last year was held at Ames, Ia., and may be held away from Lincoln on alternate years in the past, Big Six directors indicated at the conference meeting in Kansas City Friday.

From all indications the Huskers are practically assured of the meet on alternate years, and may have it oftener, the Husker track, one of the world's fastest, being especially liked by Big Six schools. Hotel accommodations at Lincoln are better than at any other conference school, Iowa State having had extreme difficulty in taking care of the athletes there last year, some men having to spend one night in Des Moines.

the demonstration given before the coaches and officials along with the high school athletes here for the all state football rally.

In the afternoon Coach Carl E. "Rube" Hoy of South Dakota who was at last year's clinic also presented offensive tactics to the crowd as the frosh teams were again called into use. The week-end sporting activities ended last night with the South Dakota-Nebraska game.

There are more than 26,000 plants in the Clark university herbarium.

Postal swim meet slated

Training has been started for the women's intercollegiate telegraphic swimming meet which will be held soon. Schools which Nebraska U is competing against are Minnesota, Illinois and Wisconsin.

According to Mickey Morrow, president of Tanksterettes, the following girls show promising prospects for the telegraphic meet: Jean McAllister, Virginia Smith, Susan Shaw, Ann Thomas, Dorothy Latsch, Janet Mickey, Ruth Coardes, Eileen Kealy, Maudie Fowler and Woodie Campbell. Maudie, Eileen and Woodie have won several diving contests in the past few years.

To meet on Saturday.

Tanksterettes will meet every Saturday from 2 to 3:30 in the Coliseum. A new point system or timing chart will be started. Each girl is to keep a chart, be present at meetings and have 1-hour practice a week. This chart is to help the girls reduce their time in speed-swimming.

Work for the Water Pageant will start after Christmas. This pageant is open to the public.

State's coaches, officials, attend NU's coaching clinic

More than one hundred fifty coaches and officials of the state attended the annual coaching clinic sponsored by the university's athletic department and the Nebraska High School Activities association Friday and Saturday.

Demonstrations and rules conferences featured the meeting, which was held in conjunction with the all-state football rally and the convention of the state's physical education teachers.

The rules conference opened Friday night, with O. L. Webb, secretary of the NHSAA, and the two officials of the Nebraska-South Dakota game—Parke Carroll of Kansas City and Guy Best, Wayne, discussing rules.

Yesterday morning Coach W. H. Browne of Nebraska discussed and demonstrated defensive tactics, with two freshmen teams aiding in
