Cathedral Chair . .

Brings Spirit of Youth

Again the lights dim low and for the 20th consecutive year the Lincoln Cathedral choir begins its series of Sunday vespers for the delight and enjoyment of students and Lincoln townspeople. A. reverent hush pervades the room as the organ stops and the director, Mr. John M. Rosborough, steps to the director's platform. The move of a single finger, like the tap of an organ key, starts the 65 voices into deep spiritual emotion, brilliant coloring, and splendid ensemble of Christiansen's "Hosanna to the Living Lord." An audience seeking to grasp the mystic spirit sits in reflection. It concerns itself with no single sectarian religion. It interprets the music into its own beliefs . . .

Students are proud of the Lincoln Cathedral choir. They are proud of its uniqueness as a non-sectarian group for Protestants, Catholics, or Jews alike. They are proud of an organization bringing culture to their learning minds. They are proud of a man whose vision of a great Cathedral of Youth is revealed thru the music drawn from the hearts of those who sing and whose life is dedicated toward the realization of an ideal. They are proud of an organization bringing credit to the city of Lincoln and the state of Nebraska.

Trials and tribulations of the choir have been many. Two years ago it was the center of a controversy between student leaders who sought its affiliation with the university and with officials and students in the School of Music. With its existence depending upon the philanthropy and generosity of its friends, however, it has always thrived. It has done so because of the unceasing spirit and ideals of its director and founder.

But the Lincoln Cathedral choir represents something more than a large group of young people who are under the thrall of a great religion and who are seeking a vision that will someday become reality. It represents the spirit of youth as it should be. The he may not visit the shrines or churches of his particular faith often, youth has the determination to show his best self. With an open mind-one which has not been contorted and moulded by problems of time and age-youth can seek pleasures, sublimities, and truth,-knowing that he will soon enough fall headlong into sorrows, confusions, and errors. It is this spirit of youth that has overthrown the conclusion that the world is complete. It is this youth that is determined to observe accurately, to accord correctly, to infer justly, and to express these operations with clearness and force. It is this youth that challenges the unfinished work of the world where the aged

Scrap Irony Chris Peterson

Been going the rounds with a bronchial surcharged hetrogenus cold (consult your doc for further information) for the last few days. Took a beating.

My nose got so red from constant moppings that I was bound to stay at home for fear that if I might show myself in public I would be dragged up before the Dies committee charged with red activities.

When I talked, it sounded as if someone had moved the Boulder Dam into my mouth and the words piled up behind it to splash over, one at a time and very unreal. In fact, when I tried to tell the doc how pneumonia developed into double pneumonia it sounded like this:

How to make petunia a double petunia: Petunia is a kind of begonia. Begonia is a kind of sausage Assauge and battery, anybody knows, is a crime. People crime trees. Trees a crowd. Crowds make noise. The noise is on your face. As is the eyes. The eyes have it. Likewise the nays. Horses neigh. Horses have colts. Go to bed with a colt and you get up with double petunia.

The little cold germs, a 100,000 of them strong, moved in on me for a district convention. Like all convention goers, they played havoc with the place of convene. On last Tuesday, they held a general convocation in my left lung. Wednesday, they heard committee reports in the blue room of the sinus glands. Thursday was "fancy free" day so all the mites took a tour en masse through the east part of my head, topping it off with a big "hodown" that night in the bronchilar tubes. It wasn't a formal affair because two jivin germs did the rhumba with my red corpuscles all night.

The mites are ingenous though. Tiring of elimbing up and down the towering sides of my throat, they converted the Adam's apple into an elevator with 24 hour service.

Perhaps it is this spirit, however, that makes the youth of today "unstable, apathetic, and impatient," to quote a recent survey made of 13,500 boys and girls between the ages of 16 and 24. Perhaps this spirit is magnified by the surprising conclusion of the survey that "only 10 per cent of them believe that honest, individual effort would give economic security" and that "young people are becoming more and more discontented with their lives." Perhaps this condition is brought upon the college student as he sees, according to latest figures, four million jobless men and women with degrees of higher education.

Only youth itself can solve these problems. Those affiliated with the Lincoln Cathedral choir and its director are well on their way toward that solution.

Never allow yourself to become a 'case' if you can help it; and never froth at the mouth about things. That's the trouble with too many people, They froth at the mouth because they're reading the same newspaper to much. They get all scared about what they think Germany's going to do. They get all worried about 'reds' in the country. They get frothed up about what's going to become of democracy. And all the time they forget that there are limitations to all things; that there always is a balance to everything." Harvard university's famed poet, Robert Frost, says that's the reason his life has been "all holidays;" whether he's working or play-

News Roundup By Davis, Loos, Mahnken

THE RUSSO-BULGAR TREATY.

Joseph Stalin has put another iron into the fire with the completion of the trade treaty between Soviet Russia and Bulgaria. Hogs, hides and other agricultural products are to be shipped from the Balkan state, while Russia in turn will undertake to deliver ferrous metals, oil products, fertilizers, chemicals, cellulose and cotton. While there are no political questions involved, the treaty seems significant. The proposed Russian exports are nearly all vital war materials, and thus seemed aimed at strengthening the hand of Russia in the Balkans. The person who must wonder about it all is Adolf Hitler, who probably supposed that his would be the first claim on whatever surplus raw materials Russia might produce. The treaty strengthens the growing suspicion that Stalin would suffer no pangs of conscience in giving the hooked cross the double

HORE-BELISHA RESIGNATION.

According to the German news agency, hopes for a general peace in Europe in the next few weeks were shattered today by Berlin's reaction to the resignation of Leslie Hore-Belisha from the British war cabinet. Whatever the reasons behind this resignation, and Chamberlain claims they have nothing to do with the war, the Germans regarded it as a further distinctively hostile act and announced that they would prosecute the war more ruthlessly than heretofore.

Hore-Belisha is known as second only to Anthony Eden among British statesmen in hatred of the nazis. Ever since his advent to the cabinet his one avowed policy has been to wreck Germany. Therefore, it comes to this correspondent as a surprise that Germany is not delighted with the news of his resignation. Instead, the nazis adopt the view that Hore-Belisha resigned so that he could have more freedom in wrecking their empire, and not be tied down with the responsibilities of a cabinet position. Gobbels is convinced that he will continue to lurk in the background of the cabinet as a miister sans portfolio.

Even at the insistent demands of a united British press Chamberlain has refused to divulge the main motives behind this resignation. From nearofficial sources it is understood that Horse-Belisha resigned to prevent any mutiny in the army by the old-guard who resent his attempts to streamline the British army. It was Hore-Belisha who first ignored the ancient British army tradition of seniority by advancing Lord Gort, head of the British Expeditionary force, over some 50 British generals. It is understood that several such similar promotions were slated for the near future, and that the British army balked at these.

This temporary shadow in the career of the 46 year old diplomat and politician marks the second time in Chamberlain's regime that a promising "youngster" has been asked to leave the cabinet. Judging from the British public opinion, Chamberlain may be forced once again to swallow his pride and appoint a man who is unsympathetic with his views to his war-time cabinet, and re-name Hore-Belisha to his cabinet. If his policies prove as beneficial and efficient as Winston Churchill's, the British may yet be able to "wreck Germany."
