NU donor, Don L. Love dies at home

Former Lincoln mayor gave money for two large residence halls

Donor of a number of gifts to the university of Nebraska and other institutions, civic leader, financier and politician, Mr. Don L. Love died at his home in Lincoln early Thursday morning after a lengthy illness.

The 77 year old former Lincoln mayor's most recent bequest to the university was a gift of $45,000 on July 24, to be used in the construction of a cooperative residence hall for women on the campus of the agricultural college. Included in the list of his other philanthropies is a sum of $55,000 given to the university in 1938 for the erection of Julia L. Love hall, a women's residence on the campus which will be used for the first time this fall.

Appreciates Lincoln.

When asked some time ago his reason for these donations to the university, the Lincoln General Hospital, and other institutions, Love replied, "Nebraska and the city of Lincoln have done much for me and I am happy in being able to show my appreciation in this way. I have been here so long and have so closely associated with Chancellor Burnett and many faculty members of former years, that the University of Nebraska seems more like my own university."

Born in Janesville, Wisconsin, he received his education at Baptist university in Des Moines and at the University of Iowa where he was granted an A. B. degree in 1886. Later admitted to the bar, he practiced in Kansas and then in Nebraska, until 1919, when he began devoting most of his time to banking. Love served as mayor of Lincoln from 1919 to 1921 and again from 1929 to 1931.

Through liberal bequests of Don L. Love, the second of the two women's halls will be completed on the campus of the agricultural college early in 1941. The first of his donations was for the erection of a women's residence hall at the campus in 1938 which will be used for the first time this fall, and is known as the Julia L. Love hall. The new building, to be known as Love Memorial hall, will have two stories and a basement, a brick construction, measuring 106 x 38 feet facing on Holdrege street west of the Agricultural hall near the arboretum.

Expressing appreciation of Mr. Love's second large benefaction to the university, Chancellor Boucher said, "A hall of this kind, which will provide facilities for cooperative self-help on the part of its residents, is along the line of one of the university's greatest needs, and both the agricultural college faculty and the administration are highly pleased by Mr. Love's gift."

46 share rooms.

Living quarters for 46 girls and a housemother will be supplied in the new residence. Two girls will share each of the sleeping rooms on the upper floors while, in groups of six and one of four, they will cooperate in the use of kitchenette-dinettes located in the basement. Facilities will also be provided for recreation, laundry, and storage.

Purpose of this arrangement, according to university officials, is to give students opportunity to apply classroom information in planning, preparing, and serving their own meals. The students will be at liberty to devise ways of reducing living costs, and the program will allow for food supplies which may be brought from their homes.

"Unique as to arrangement and privileges among residence halls in colleges and universities of this country, the new cooperative house is the answer to investigations which have been conducted for some time by Miss Helen Hosp, dean of women, and Miss Margaret Fedde, chairman of the home economics department," said Chancellor Boucher. "Mr. Love's generosity allows the university to alleviate a difficult housing problem for women students in the College of Agriculture."

Residence privileges in the new building will be granted to deserving women as scholarships issued in the name of the donor. The scholarship will be worth at least $100 per year to the recipients who will be selected by a committee of the College of Agriculture faculty.

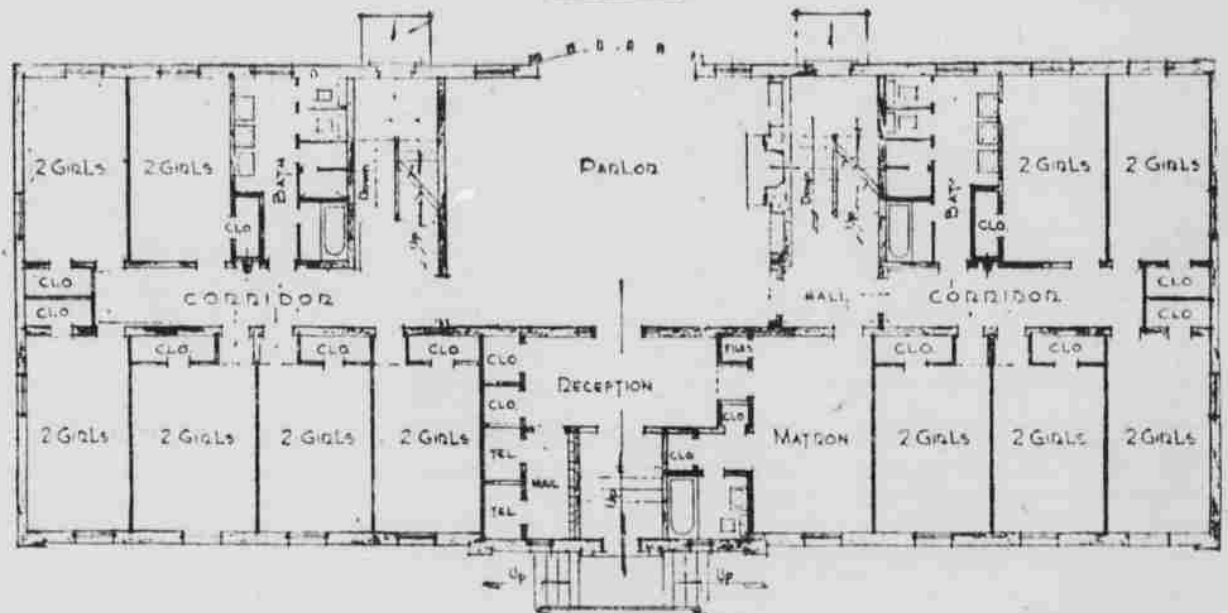

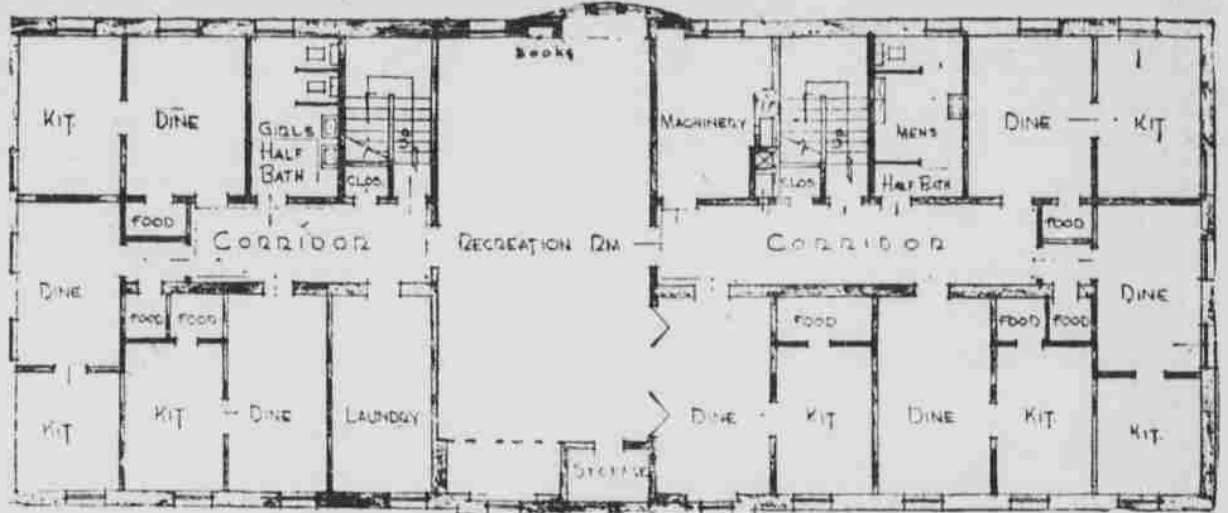

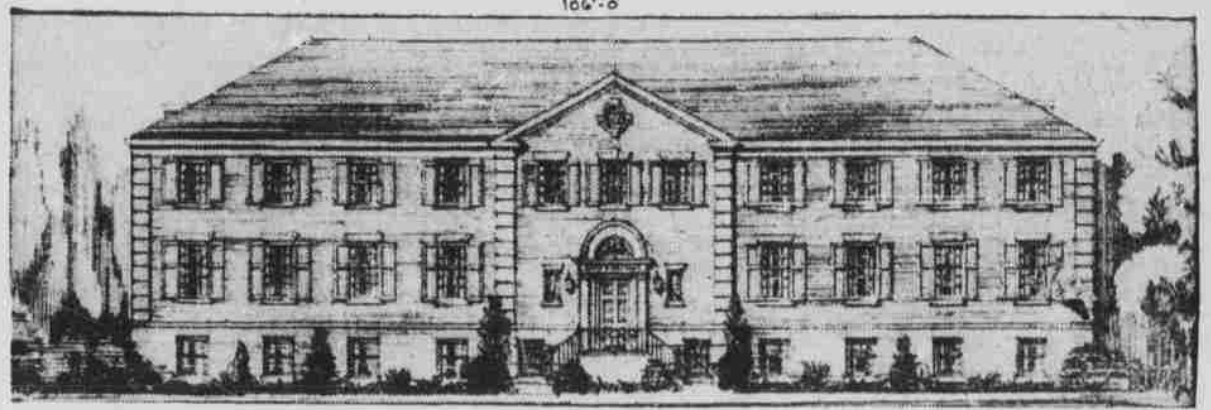

Worcester will address Iowa nurses association

Dr. D. A. Worcester, chairman of the department of educational psychology and measurements, will speak before the Iowa State Nurses Association in Burlington, Ia., on Oct. 2. His subject will be "Leadership."
