

Christman etc, etc, hike, here we go again

This Saturday, a young gentleman, one P. Christman, the big, blonde Viking giant known from Saskatchewan to Sasst as "Pitch-in' Paul," "The Blonde Bomber," "The Missouri Mauler," "The Dangerous Dane," et cetera, will make his second appearance on the gridiron of Nebraska Memorial stadium.

The other time, in 1938, Mr. Christman led his team to a 13-9 victory over a stubborn Cornhusker team.

Last year, at Columbia, in keeping with his general performance for the year (which earned for him an All-American berth), the same gentleman handed Nebraska a 27-13 defeat which was recorded as one of the major upsets of the 1940 season.

Orf twins gone.

In those other two games however, Paul was aided and abetted by two long Tiger-men, the Orf twins, who were in themselves a pair of potential All-American players in the eyes of many sports writers.

Just how well he can do without these two lanky flanks is a question for conjecture.

To date, Coach Don Faurot's team, last year's Big Six conference champions, have played two conference games, winning both handily.

Walk on Cyclones.

On October 12, the Tigers downed Kansas State, 24-13, with Christman's knee injury cutting down his playing time considerably.

Last week he sat out most of the Iowa State game on the bench while his mates encountered very little difficulty in bowling over the Iowans to the tune of a 30 to 14 victory.

Just exactly how effective his passes will be against the Cornhusker pass defense which proved to be so sketchy against Indiana, but showed considerable improvement at Lawrence last week remains to be seen.

Here's the start of a spinner with Missouri's Paul Christman on the right getting ready to shoot the pigskin to Jimmy Starmer on a tricky reverse. The Tigers are loaded with reverses and spinners in their bag of football hoop-a-la.
