Alliteration . . .

"Martin, Barton, and Fish!"

Those three names make up one of the most humorous phrases ever put into a political campaign.

The congressional voting record of republicans during the Roosevelt administration is the strongest fact from the record which democrats can use to attack the republican party.

Just to make sure—

Once a week for the past three weeks, the DAILY survey department, directed by Ralph Sherman Combs, a Wilkie man, has published its results.

But to get to the point, the DAILY is sponsoring one final poll; we hope it arouses enough interest to get everyone to vote.

On The Side

by Bob Aldrick

Hamlet's soliloquy—college version:

To study or not to study—that is the question:

Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer

The slings and arrows of raging teachers,

Or to take arms against a sea of assignments,

And by opposing get them. To go out tonight,—to have fun;

And by kicking the gong around to say we end the heartache and thousand natural shocks a student's flesh is heir to—'tis a consummation devoutly to be wished.

To go out; to have fun; perchance to flunk out! Ay, there's the rub!

For after a night of frolic what grades may come when we have shuffled through this semester must give us pause: there's the respect that makes calamity of school life;

For who would bear the scorn of parents, the reader's wrongs, the fellow-student's contumely,

When he himself might his average make with a little midnight oil-burning?

Thus conscience doth make scholars of us all—part of the time, anyway;

And thus the native hue of dating is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought;

And good times of great pith and moment,

With this regard, their currents turn awry,

And lose the name and phone number of action.

The Bard in this column seems to be popping out today so we'll just go it whole hog and give you the headlines in a copy of the DAILY as seen by the Pathological Poet:

Fenders will have fewer dents

When parking's solved by Innocents.

Every republican's an in-the-groover

When he listens to Herbert Hoover.

All law seniors will sport canes

During sunshine, snows, and rains.

Nebraska Sweetheart filings due.

File me one. Oh boy. Woo woo.

Three cheers for the student directory

It's almost as good as the one by A. T. & T. (The meter wasn't so good in that last one. Somebody please call up the gas company and have them take a look at our meter.—Joke.)

Ag contributes money to YM fund

If Mr. Kuhn were around he'd want it for his bund.

"Y" groups meet on both campuses

And if it rains they'll all get dampuses (Maybe we'd better quit.)

Aw, just a couple more.

Well, all right.

Harmony Hour features brasses

We'll go if they'll serve demitasses.

Awgwan sales top last year's

Let's celebrate with a couple of beers.

That's all. Promise never to do it again.

Five former University of Alabama footballers are now coaching in the Southeastern conference.

Patterson back from East Attends national YM meeting

Dr. C. H. Patterson, associate professor of philosophy, and chairman of the YMCA advisory board, has just returned from Pittsburgh where he attended the annual convention of the national council of YMCA as delegate from the West-Central area.

Recently Dr. Patterson's aspirations for the 'Y' here were attained in a talk with Chancellor Boucher.

Intensive study.

"What we need," says Dr. Patterson, "is a thoro and intensive study of the YMCA on the campus, to enable us to discover what the YM has been doing, and its relationship to other religious organizations. A committee has been set up to study functions of the student YMCA in colleges and universities.

To aid in study of the local situation, we have requested a visit to our campus by Dr. Clarence Shedd, director of religious education at Yale university. Dr. Shedd is known as the historian of student Christian movements in the country, and is probably the best informed man on the subject of religious organizations in their relation to colleges and universities."

Scrap Irony

By Chris Petersen

ON ADJUSTMENT.

From . . . Blair, Nebr.

Via Carrier Pigeon.

Dear Chris:

Am writing to you from a man-hole on Main street where I am engaged in watching green turtles knit mittens for Congo war refugees. As my labors stopped for a moment, I contemplated.

Now that you're back at "state," have you noticed that girls with figures lush always manage to get the super-rush from the upper class of males? And it is clear that this entails hardships on such guys as me. There are undoubtedly many who would agree it would be much nicer if all the homely gals were the ones who got the play from these boys who have hay.

If they would use their Packards, Cords, Dusenbergs and brand new Fords, mostly Fords, on the girls that I can't see, this would clear the way for me to go stepping out with femmes that I now consider gems.

On the other hand if we were as abnormal as could be and our ideas as to class were vice versa to the mass, then I could be going for the creatures that the other guys abhor.

Failing then to change the race, I feel that this will be the case: I'll probably end up being a psychopath, one of the many creatures of God's wrath.

There is, in short, a need for readjustment.

Yours in a manhole, Sir Will Capps, Cor. at Large.

Astronomy class meets at 4:30 Saturday morning

Students accustomed to grumbling loud, long and noisily every time they get up for an eight o'clock should have seen the energetic astronomy students as they eagerly hurried to the dome on ag campus at 4:30 a. m. Saturday to take a look at the stars. Despite the fact that attendance is voluntary 25 percent of the class could not resist the desire to see the early morning sky. As a reward (for their getting upness) the early risers saw Venus, Jupiter and four of its satellites, Saturn's rings and the last quarter of the moon.

Prose magazine offers new idea in English book

AUSTIN, Tex. (ACP). Freshman students of English can now reach for a magazine instead of a textbook.

Designed in illustrated magazine form, the Freshman Prose Annual—hailed by publishers as the first new idea in textbooks in 15 years—was edited by Drs. Mody C. Boatright, University of Texas; Robert M. Gay, Simmons college, Boston, and George S. Wykoff, Purdue, Lafayette, Ind.

Material is grouped under five sections, college life, problems of social adjustment, democracy and war, science, and art literature—all illustrated with snapshots, cartoons and masterpiece reproductions.

The magazine-text, introduced this fall, is already in its second printing.

Dear Editor:

Dear Editor: Who would have imagined that revelations would arise from orientation lectures? Believe it or not, they do. Just read this.

"Of the 1938 Freshman class, over 50 percent had not, upon entering school, had a date," says Dr. William Gregory of the psychology department. Think of it, 50 percent! Our high schools are failing in their match-making ability.

Certainly the University of Nebraska need not be too proud of itself for in that same year, according to Dr. Gregory, there were numbers of graduating seniors who after four years of college had not had a date.

But perhaps things are looking up. One finds comfort in reading the wealth of encouraging material which graces Jo Duree's "Socially Speaking." Keep up the good work kids.
