World's Largest Telescope," written by Lloyd Jessen, freshman in the civil engineering college.

Jessen, employed in the department of astronomy, and interested in telescopes himself, has written in his article about the 200-inch telescope atop Mount Wilson in California.

Other articles appearing in this month's issue of the publication include one explaining the development of testing apparatus for rat-ing fuels by Don Davis, sophomore in the M. E. college and a humorous resume of the engineer-lawyer

Students report drill not required

Of the four schools represented at the annual national Pershing Rifle Regimental drill meet held yesterday in the coliseum, only one requires military science of all male students, as is the practice at Nebraska.

ROTC is compulsory at the University of Iowa for the first two vears. At the universities of Minnesota, South Dakota, and Wisconsin ROTC is optional and reaction has been quite favorable, the men here reported.

However, in all three states, according to the students, the present outlook is for compulsory military science when school begins in September.

In Wisconsin, such a bill has assed in all committees of the legislature and probably become a law this month, Minnesota and South Dakota universities are likely to have a similar system,
