Federal ROTC inspection starts today

Results show school rating

Beginning today with classroom and practical examination of all three units in the ROTC brigade, this year's annual federal inspection will run through Thursday and Friday, Col. C. A. Thuis, commandent of cadets, announced.

Results of the inspection will determine whether Nebraska will receive the "honor school rating" given on a basis of training, appearance and facilities. The rating has been won for the past ten years. In fact, no one in the military department can remember the last time Nebraska failed to get the honor.

Visiting officers who will conduct the inspection include Col. C. A. Barby, University of Iowa and Lieut. Col. M. E. Craig, University of Wyoming of the infan-try; Lieut. Col. P. Winlock, Iowa State, field artillery; Col. Ray-mond W. Briggs, field artillery, Seventh corps area, Omaha, administrative inspection, and Lieut. Col. Lewis C. Gordon, Missouri School of Mines, of the engineers.

Highlight of the three day inspection will be the parade and re-view of all cadets Thursday afternoon at 3 p. m. The brigade has been preparing for this event for over a month in four parades which have preceded the inspec-getting into the war ourselves was supported by 30 percent of the questionnaire signers while 13 percent favored an isolationist policy

> In a letter accompanying the questionnaire, Clyde Martz, editor of the NEBRASKAN explained that the memorial being circulated by the faculty was permitting only two choices; either a member of that faculty could sign and thereby support the program being advocated, or he could refuse to sign and his opinion on our national policy would not be voiced.

Since the question of intervention, aid to Britain, relative isolationism or pacifism is of immence importance to every American, Martz declared the NEBRASKAN would give every person interested a chance to express his stand.

And to avoid any opportunity of pressure or the fear of a repetition of the persecutions of 1917-18 influencing a faculty member's mind, the petitions were left unsigned.
