

Student Lounge, Elevator For Books Only Features of New Library

What ten years ago was merely an idle dream has become a reality today in the form of scaffolding, builders and cement between social sciences and teachers college where the new Don Love Memorial library is being erected. In appearance and arrangement of facilities the new building will differ radically from the old university library. It will be of modified Georgian design and will resemble closely Carrie Bell Raymond hall on the exterior. On the first floor, which will be a semi-basement floor, the reserve reading room will be located as (See LIBRARY, page 8)

Colored Ribbons Identify Pledges on UN Campus

Like a bursting flower, several hundred bits of nighly colored grosgrain and satin ribbons blossomed forth on the campus this week as fifteen sororities went thru the prowess of informal pledging. To serve until the freshmen women get their standard pledge pins, the Daily offers this directory of ribbons and houses. Alpha Xi Delta girls wear the gold and double blue.

Gamma Phi Beta is signified by the brown and mode ribbons. Kappa Alpha Thetat has gold and black ribbons, and Kappa Deltas are adorned in green and white. The ribbons of Phi Mu are white and rose. A national rite of the Sigma Kappas is the wearing of violet and maroon. Alpha Phi pledges sport the silver and bordeaux. The girls of the arrow Pi Beta Phi have the wine and silver blue pinned to their pledges. Delta Delta Delta's wear silver and gold and blue. Delta Gamma girls may be recognized by their bronze, pink and blue ribbons. Kappa Kappa Gamma's ribbons are navy and light blue, while the pledges of Alpha Omicron Pi wear red. An innovation on this campus is the scarlet red and olive green bows of Alpha Chi Omega. Grosgrains of cardinal and straw belong to the pledges of Chi Omega. Sigma Delta Tau girls own ribbons of case au lait and old blue. In most sororities the custom of wearing ribbons is age old. Two, Alpha Chi Omega and Gamma Phi Beta, gave gold identification bracelets to their pledges. Both bracelets have the Greek letters of their sorority engraved on them. And the ribbons must be worn. Alpha Omicron Pi, Phi Mu and Gamma Phi Beta extract penalties from their pledges when they fail to don their colors. In some cases extra duty must be done, while in others black marks are given to be erased by sweat of brow. The ribbons must be worn until the girls receive their pledge pins at the end of September or early October.

The Saturday Letter

Dear Friend:

The "O," the "Ah," and the "Isn't it marvelous," book lovers would have the college man going about quoting "immortal words," "undying phrases" and "golden sentences," the while reverently carrying volumes of the classics from classroom to boarding house, to athletic field, to arboretum, and to dormitory. But, my gosh, Joe ain't that kind of a guy!

We have long been familiar with the poorly dressed tailor, the shoeless cobbler, the physician who is careless in his health habits and the carpenter who lives in a house having a sagging back porch. The college student does live with books all about him, does carry them from place to place each day, does spend hours reading in libraries and yet this same student is not especially bookish,—that is, bookish, in the, "O my goodness," pattern or according to the "too sweet for words" tradition.

Joe is a book lover and is bookish (in his own way) but don't expect him to get mushy about it. He does appreciate the creative perfection of those who lived and wrote during past centuries, but he also has faith and interest in living writers and in books that are still press-damp. He does believe in libraries but he doesn't believe a library should be a museum, and he is definitely influenced as far as bookishness is concerned by the general condition of world affairs.

Very truly,

Raymond E. Manchester,

Dean of Men, Kent State University, Kent, Ohio.
