Over the Weekend.

There were things doing over the weekend besides the game. Marie Hossack, Pi Phi, came back with a Phi Gam pin from an Ames student. He is Ray Freeman of Omaha. Marie doesn't have a picture of him yet, but promises a close view at the Iowa U game... Fay Parker, Delta Tau Delta bachelor treasurer, had two dates this weekend. And they were both with Kay Tunison, KKG... Another pin hanging, and quite a surprise, we hear, was Harriet Magnussen, Theta, and Malcolm Dow, Phi Psi...

Leave Her Alone, Dick.

Poor girl! Dick Childs, Delt, promised his nurse he would stay away from her for a whole week so she could study for her state board exams. But he just couldn't do it and went back in three days... Sort of a new combination is that of Jean Miller of the dorm and Ray Treinan, Phi Gam... Gamma Phi Ardis Freeman has Louis Daiger's AGR pin. She got it Saturday night at the AGR house party... Jack Conklin, Sigma Chi, has really been giving his girl in Ashland a rush. He went down to see her Sunday, sent her roses yesterday and will see her again Saturday. She is a school teacher there. Maybe the rest of us could take a few lessons...

Triangle.

An eternal triangle which promises to be really eternal is among Betty Bonebright, AOPi, and Sigma Chi's Stan Martz and Fred McLafferty... There are several house parties coming up this week end. Among them will be the Pi Phi party. The question is, just who Margaret Koupal will be taking. You see, she went to the AGR house party with Innocent Don Steele and is going to the Farm House fall party with Howard Mengshol...

Who's.

Can you tell me who's Sigma Nu bracelet Mary Lou Holtz, Alpha Chi prexy, is wearing? We've tried and tried to find out for you but nobody knows... Ellene Politis of Howard Hall is getting a rush

Barber Shop Quartet Stars In Matinee Flickers Show

. . . With Peanut Vendors, Pianist

More than usual confusion will reign at next Sunday's old time Union Flicker show. To the usual noise of hisses and cheers and the ballyhooing of butcher boys will be added the close harmony of a barber shop quartet.

On Sunday, Oct. 12, at 8 p. m., the Union will dust off the files to bring out two old, silent movies.

On the program are two comedies. Harold Lloyd stars in the first, "Grandma's Boy." In the second feature of the double bill, Buster Keaton will take the lead in "Sherlock Jr."

Popcorn! Peanuts!

The white-coated, long-mustached butcher boys will add to the general confusion atmosphere by selling their peanuts and popcorn during the performance. And Russ Gibson, music maker for last year's shows, will be on hand again to play the "piano nuckelodion."

During intermissions, while the reels are being changed, the "Tennessee Tramps" make their debut. The identity of the tramps is something of a mystery but we can tell from an aviator from Wayne. He is leaving for Canada to join the Canadian air force soon... Mary Jean Lauvitz, Gamma Phi prexy, has a very interesting necklace from Honolulu. It is made from chicken feet which have turned to coral. One of her two army boy friends sent it to her...

Practically all the pledges from practically all the fraternities were in Omaha last night. Fraternities represented were Phi Gam, Kappa Sig, Sigma Nu and AGR... If they'd gotten together what a party they could have had.

Towne club members received candy again last night, and this time it was really a surprise. Jane Sherburn passed the sweets. She's wearing Bob Frish's ring now.

Camera-Shy?

There's a hustle and bustle in Rudge and Guenzel's photo department these days with all of your friends getting their Cornhusker pictures snapped before the deadline. And everybody is hurrying to get in on Rudge's special on photographs to be sent home to mother or to be given to the current flame. Set in modern scenes and featuring a large variety of frames, these picture portraits, either tinted or plain, make a swell gift. Don't forget to have your picture taken before that deadline. It only takes Rudge's a few moments to get a nifty picture of you.—Adv.

Inquisitive Reporter Meets Fellow Sardine in Mall Hole

. . . Unearths Answer

BY MAXINE LYNN.

"Walking along the mall one day, in the merry, merry month of October" I fell into that—hole-in-the-ground, which probably would be better described as a tunnel. How my falling in ever happened I'll never know for the dimensions of myself and the tunnel differ exceedingly, but suddenly there I was in the dirt, the grime, and the slime of the more realistic side of life.

Granted a sardine-can I was in fair position to vie for the station in life held by that inenarrable fish. This was one of the few suitable places for swearing and I would have done that grand thing had I not resolved to restrain while yet a child. I picked myself up, rather squirmed like the one and only I vied to be. When my head finally protruded a foot above ground I found myself facing a fellow-sardine.

He looked about like I knew I must, so with the relieved feeling that comes to one finding he is not in a sinking boat alone, I allowed curiosity to open my grimy lips.

Unsatisfaction in conversation.

"Where am I?" I queried.

"Here," said he.

"Indeed, and what is here?" I had let myself in for the first answer.

"We are," was the agonizing reply.

Falling into the hole was enough but this... "Could you inform me as to the future employment of the tunnel?"

"For heat," quoth he.

"From h—?" I had slipped on that one and so had my temper.

"From the University heating system." Had my wits failed? Had this disciple of the Silent offered, volunteered or what have you, an answer?

"Heat for what?" I bargained for another revealing answer.

With a vaguely disquieting, superior air he thus accounted: "We are usurping upon the inviolable sanctities of those numerous deities and devils of the lower regions to disintegrate a path through the passionate warmth of precious heat may flow to yonder newly-acquired collegiate building known in this metropolis as Bancroft school."
