

Thiel Suggests New Plan for Elections

At one of the quietest meetings in several weeks, President Burton Thiel suggested yesterday that the council make plans to allow campaigning by candidates and to permit publicity for all candidates and thus create more interest in student elections.

Thiel added that the council would do everything in its power this year to convince the student body that the council is sincerely interested in the problems of student government and will try to solve problems in a non-partisan way. His suggestion was referred to a committee for a report at the meeting next week.

The council announced that there will be a sophomore president this year if the registration office shows that there were enough sophomore votes cast for the office.

Bob Bramson, chairman of the point committee, reported that tabulation of the points of everyone in activities was almost completed.

Foreign Students Now at UN Tell About Mother Countries

. . . At Rotary Club Meeting

Foreign students attending the university were guest speakers Tuesday noon at a Rotary luncheon where they discussed their mother countries of Hungary, Turkey, Chile, Greece and Jugo-Slavia. All are members of Dr. J. E. A. Alexis' modern language department classes.

Discussing Hungary, Kurt Porjes who came from Budapest three years ago, said "Budapest is a beautiful city, especially at night when the lights of the city make it even more brilliant. All Hungary is now in confusion," he related, "because one day the country is 49 percent Communist and 51 percent Fascist, the next day vice versa, according to the assassinations overnight."

Turkish Women Change.

Ulnshahin Muzaffer spoke of his native county, Turkey, after it became a republic in 1923. "That changed everything," he said. "Now the young women can date, wear lipstick and rouge and go about just like they do in America."

Speaking on Greece, Gus J. Kantras predicted that his country would be free again. "Greece has been under the domination of world powers in the past and she has always regained her freedom

Many Mice Blitz Bessey as Winter Winds Blow Chill

Apparently attracted by the abundance of animals in the biology experimental labs a herd of mice moved into Bessey hall when mother nature began to be less generous with her crumbs out of doors and began sending cool fall breezes beneath mousey coats. Since then A. A. Shaw, custodian at Bessey, has been on a mouse hunt.

Within three days, Mr. Shaw, with the aid of a few traps strategically placed and a lot of mouse bait, caught not one but 53.

Gregory Tells YM, YW Group About Faculty

"The wide gap between students and faculty is largely the imagination of the students," said Dr. W. S. Gregory, speaking at the first meeting of the personal relations committees of the YMCA and the YWCA yesterday.

The fact that the faculty is in position to judge them seems to quell the students and make them feel that the faculty is not interested in them, but in reality the faculty enjoys helping the students by talking with them individually," he said.

Warren Lamson, chairman of the committee on student-faculty relations, will lead the discussion at the next meeting Nov. 5.

Uni Theatre Scores Melodramatic Hit

By June Jamieson.

Lady Isabel trod the theatre boards last night—"faint, wretched, ill, mad!"—to show once more the dreadful wages of sin and faithlessness as the University Theatre opened the 1941 season with a production, complete with hisses for the villain, of the immortal melodrama, "East Lynne."

Playing to an audience of approximately 400 enthusiastic students, Paul Bogen's initial effort proved a complete success. Not only did the actors delight the audience with their exaggerated gestures and dialogue, but the whole scheme of drama in the gay nineties, from 34 inch hand-bills to the advertisements on the roll-up curtain, received applause and comment from the on-lookers.

Veteran Portrayals.

The role of Lady Isabel, the faithless but repentant wife, was played to the hilt by Maribel Hitchcock, and that of the old-maid sister, taken by Bette Lou Rangalar, was a performance worthy of a veteran. The male lead, Bill McBride, took cheers not only as his due as the hero, but for his convincing portrayal of the fine, upright country lawyer. In minor roles, but notable for their acting ability, were Harriet Magnussen and Roy Sheaff.

In keeping with the tradition of the theatre of that period, the Theatre printed hand-bills which extolled in flowery language the virtues of their play and their players.

USC Heads Warn Students to Eat, Not Throw Fruit

Unless the students can keep their fruit at home, the student government of the University of Southern California may be denied use of the Greek theater as a meeting place for rallies. The "Daily Californian," makes it clear that the bad effects of the fruit-throwing fad have become evident in the staining of the marble, memorial chairs and stagefloor of the theater.

Regents Plan New Home Ec Ag Building

Another step toward the realization of the long awaited new home economics building on ag campus was taken last week when the university board of regents issued a call for sealed bids for construction of the proposed structure.

Proposals for the labor and materials required will be received by the regents until Friday, November 14. These must be in accordance with plans and specifications prepared by Meginnie & Schamberg, Lincoln architects.

Contractors who wish to bid on the job may obtain the plans and specifications by applying to the architects, and will be required to furnish the corporate surety performance bond equal to 100 percent of the contract price. No bidder may withdraw his bid for a period of 30 days after the deadline for receipt of bids.

He Likes His Work . . .

Altho It's Woman's Domain, Ag Prof Knows His Kitchens

. . . Through Research

Inquiries at the various schools are shuffled around until the school which has carried on definite research involving the question finally furnishes the correct solution.

Established in 1928 under the direction of Dr. Greta Gray, now head of home economics work at the University of California, the laboratory went under the direction of Prof. Barager when it moved to the home ec annex, ten years ago.

Prof. Barager is a physicist. In fact, he was a member of the physics department faculty until he went into the "housewife" department. The move was made because of the need for the principle of physics in carrying out research. Prof. Barager has never regretted the change.

Football Contest Winners Collect

Winners of the Daily football contest may now receive their prize money in the Daily business office. The winners are: Charles Vacanti, Paul Farrens and John Waskiewicz.

There were entre-acts starring "the finest vaudeville talent, in new and different routines" which specialized in numbers such as "A Bird in a Gilded Cage" and "While Strolling in the Park One Day". Maribel Hitchcock and Robert Hyde brought down the house with their rendition of "Frankie and Johnny."

Audience Has Fun.

Popcorn and peanut vendors wended their way through the crowd after each of the five acts and provided the missiles which, in spite of a request on the program, were thrown on the stage every time Sir Francis Levison, the unprincipled villain, appeared to twist his dark mustache. The spirit of the audience was all that was expected, and more, as they entered into the spirit of the production.

Student director for the play was Phyllis Welch, and the orchestra was under the direction (See EAST LYNNE, Page 2.)

New Uniforms Ready Today For Officers

ROTC uniforms for the advanced cadets will be available for try-ons Thursday and Friday, Oct. 30 and 31. All advanced course cadets who were measured this year for uniforms must report on these days at the ROTC supply room in Nebraska hall to try on their uniforms.

Alteration of officers uniforms can also be made during this time. The delay in delivery of the uniforms is due to the defense program.

One of Five.

The laboratory, which has been carrying on the research for the past 13 years, is one of five such state laboratories in the United States. Universities of Maine, Virginia, Iowa State and Purdue have similar programs.

The laboratories at the various universities work on a co-operative basis. At the present time, the ag lab is conducting a test on small food mixers in co-operation with Purdue and Iowa State.
