

Red-Head Wears Blue . . .

Absolutely irresistible . . . both that smile of Pi Phi Belle Cochran's and the lovely navy crepe dress she is wearing. The skirt is closely accordian pleated, the neckline, so-o-o flattering with its fluffy longerie whiteness edged with powder blue grosgrain. Dan Schmitt, Sig Alph, seems to be very pleased with the whole thing, and why not, in those good looking Varsity-Town clothes from Magee's.

What the Best Dressed Coed Wears-Plants

What the well-dressed plant will wear? No, what plant the well-dressed coed will wear—

Spring dresses, per usual, will not tend to plain colors, but run to dashing red, purple, green and blue in huge flowers of no particular species, but with large petals and leaves.

For a background, white or egg-shell sets off both design and color to best effect. Many of the new skirt prints have no background, but, jungle fashion, the flowers cover the entire woof.

The first appearances of these spring prints came as slack shirts to liven up the outfit. They were closely followed by full skirted formals, which had to be full skirted in order to get an entire flower on, in some cases.

For the afternoon dress, plain blouse and flowered skirts are good again, need we say "good," for they are always good, they are absolutely necessary this spring.

Instead of the conventional gardenia, rose, daisy or chrysanthemum, choose something different. Two or three carnations look very real. Of course this article takes it for granted you can't afford real flowers, for if you can, you won't have to read this article, you will know what to wear. Flowers which are different are snapdragons, columbine, or fragile hair-bells.

Be sure to wear flowers; be sure they are different, if real, choose azalia or one of the less common flowers of the potted plant variety.

To save money, if you want real flowers, grow your own. They are very little trouble and the cheer they bring to your room as well as the money they save will pay big dividends, as well as provide you with one of the essentials of spring fashions.

Spring Ration List Will Include Cosmetics; Cologne Almost Gone

By Betty Moor.

Conservativeness will be the keynote of cosmetics for this spring.

Manufacturing of cosmetics will be on a smaller scale; distributors will be pro-rated; and you will see very few of the attractive combination kits of powders, creams, rouge, and lipstick. Shipments are coming thru much slower, but they will be able to meet the demands of the more careful buyer.

In the spring a young woman's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of a new, fresh wardrobe—and other things. Along with the new wardrobe comes thoughts of a spring complexion. She will want her face to reflect the note of spring as does her costume. Then, too she will consider the problem of the right shade of fingernail polish, and the right perfume. Shall I wear Tweed by Lenthic with my new suit, and should I get some of Rubinstein's Enchante' for evening wear?

That War Again.

The young lady's problems will be the same as many other springs—but her solutions will be somewhat changed by the war situation.

Here are some things to note! In six months the present supply of alcohol used in cologne manufacturing will be exhausted. Only 35 percent of the original supply may be maintained, so the young lady will turn from the use of cologne to more extensive use of dusting powder, skin sachet and perfumes. We will miss the refreshing qualities of cologne, but we will enjoy most of the same fragrances in perfume, omitting the exhausted supply of imported perfumes.

There will be a boom in the sale of leg make-up this summer. The younger generation will really enjoy complete leg freedom, without hose, in spectators and sandals.

Scratching Limited.

Where fingernails are concerned, the music and typing students will be back in the majority, because short, rounded fingernails are predicted to take the place of the fragile, long tapers. Miss Collegiate will view the situation from a practical point of view as to her duties in civilian defense. There are some lovely new shades of polish this spring, tending to be less vivid and well adapted to the new pastel shades of clothes.

You will note more harmony in all make-up this spring. There will be exact matching of rouge, lipstick, and fingernail polish. Outstanding are three color groups in make-up. With pastels you will love the good selection of delicate shades, like Pink Camelia by Barbara Gould. Take note of the true red shades in most of the cosmetic lines. This is the shade to be worn with any color of costume.

The new true reds seem to have an extra warm glow, not only in make-up but in everything in feminine apparel. For evening, the shades will be warm, but lighter than the winter colors. Barbara Gould's Red Gentian, is a typical example.

Plan, use, and select cosmetics wisely, and the American women will have no need of fear for complexion beauty.

Books . . .

operation of the student body this number can be easily doubled, officials hope.

A committee will call for the books at the respective houses and organizations Saturday morning they should be ready to go at that time. Nebraska's books will then be picked up for distribution to the various United States army camps.
