WSSF Campaign To End Monday

The World Student Service Fund drive on this campus will end Monday after a two weeks campaign. Committee chairmen will meet the first of next week to report and tabulate the amount of funds turned in and pledged.

"All other drives on the campus have been for men in the forces here in this country or for casualties of war. This is the only drive for men who have had to leave the U. S. and who after that were fortunate enough to be taken prisoners—if anything had to happen to them," said Wilkins.

The work of the WSSF in going into camps where Americans are being held prisoners is the newest (See MONDAY, page 2)

Civil Service Seeks Women As Chemists

Four Year College Course Including 30 Hours Chem Needed for Application

Junior chemists are now being sought by the Civil Service Commission to perform research, investigative, or other work in some branch of chemistry. Paying $2,000 a year, the tests require no written test. Applicants' qualifications will be judged from their experience, education and training.

Since the navy yards, arsenals and other government laboratories are now employing them in chemical work, women are especially urged to apply. Completion of a four-year course in a recognized college with 30 semester hours in chemistry is required, the senior students who will complete the required course in chemistry within four months of the date of filing may apply.

No experience is required for the jobs, although preference in appointment may be given to applicants showing experience in chemical or related work. There are no age limits for this examination.

Applications must be filed with the Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C., and will be accepted until the needs of the service have been met. Application forms and further information regarding this and other opportunities open to chemists in government work may be obtained at the postoffice.
