

Freshmen Face Great Problems

New Students Study With Double Purpose: Themselves, Country

Not in a quarter of a century have entered freshmen or Junior Division students faced more significant responsibilities than today, according to Dr. G. W. Rosenlof, director of admissions.

Today they enter upon their studies with two purposes—one for themselves and the other for their country. Students feel they must prepare for service in the armed forces or in war industry first.

They must also prepare for citizenship for a postwar period and qualify for making their way in life as self-respecting citizens. Neither of these purposes may be forgotten in times like these, Dr. Rosenlof said.

University authorities, including its instructors and administrative officers, are sparing no efforts to insure an educational program wholly in harmony with the demands of our government.

The director of admissions has announced that the office of admissions is anxious to help or assist all freshmen and entering students, and students are urged to use the facilities of the office at any time.

University Offers War Training Aircraft Course

Vacancies for several students are still open in a class in aircraft assembly and inspection, according to Prof. W. L. DeBaufre, director of war training at the university.

Designed to train workers for the Omaha bomber plant and other aircraft assembly plants, the course begins next Monday as a part of the engineering college program. Classes start at 8 a. m. and will be continued for 15 weeks.

Also starting Monday is a new night course in drafting and shop mathematics for which preference in selection of students will be given to women and older men.

Cobs, Tassels Conduct Campus Freshmen Tours

For the third successive year Corn Cobs and Tassels will conduct tours of the city campus for freshmen and entering students.

Tours starting at the Temple will be conducted every half hour from 9 to 11:30 a. m., 1 to 3:30 p. m. on Monday; 9 to 11:30 a. m., 1 to 4:30 p. m. on Tuesday and Wednesday.

According to Dean Nels Bengtson, head of junior division, "The tours are an excellent opportunity for students to become well acquainted with their campus. Interesting facts about the University and courses taught in each building will be reviewed." The tours will last about 45 minutes and are a part of the freshman orientation course.
