

Dean Harper Speculates . . . Continuance of Fraternities Uncertain During Wartime

. . . Will Be Revived Afterwards

What will happen to fraternities during the war crisis? Whether this school year will mark finis to frats for the duration is a debatable statement. When queried on such questions, W. C. Harper, UN assistant dean of men, was reluctant to speculate on the future of the groups.

Dean Harper believes that fraternities should be ready to accept the changes and modifications that will be dealt to the frat system during the war. Whether fraternities will survive the war is probably the main question, and only time will answer this question.

If the reserves are called in, the fraternities undoubtedly will become inactive. After the war it is quite probable that the groups will be revived. However there are many possibilities regarding the future whereby fraternity houses will play a more active part in the war. There is a possibility that the army will take over colleges as places for training men. In this case the army might feed, house, and clothe soldier students and use fraternities for barracks. This however is speculative and is only a possibility.

UN Building Used.

In 1918 the present social science building was used as a barrack for members of the Student Army Training Corps. Fraternities continued to exist through the short war as students under 20 were not being drafted. The S.A.T.C. fraternity men at UN were still active although not living at the house. However on many campuses fraternities were taken over by the government.

This year fraternities are functioning as during peace years. Freshmen are still freshmen and are more baffled than in previous years. The Interfraternity Council thus far has not proposed any adjusting measures as to initiation. There is a possibility that pledges who make their averages be initiated three or four weeks after the start of next semester providing they make their grades. However this has not been proposed, and then too, the board of control would have to approve any a folk dance festival at the coliseum.

Richard O. Johnson, mayor of Lincoln, and Chancellor C. S. Boucher extended welcomes to the convention at yesterday morning's session in the coliseum. Dr. Walter Judd, physician from Minneapolis, and Dr. Rufus B. Von Kleinsmid, president of the University of Southern California, Los Angeles, were principal speakers of the morning. Charles W. Ferguson, associate editor of the Reader's Digest, addressed the general session Thursday night.

Panel discussions were held Thursday afternoon and will be held Friday afternoon by those concerned with physical education and health, teachers personnel problems, democracy in education, guidance in secondary schools, school finance and cooperation in building morale.

Luncheons were held Thursday by the are, commercial arts, Latin, mental hygiene, and vocational agriculture groups. Meetings were held Thursday afternoon by the High School Activities association and modern language group. The class room teachers and normal training group held a dinner Thursday night.

Luncheons will be held today by the following groups: English and speech, industrial arts, mathematics and the armed forces.

Ag Council Sponsors Party

The Ag Religious council will sponsor a Hallowe'en party Saturday in the activities building. The party will be mostly square dancing on the main floor with various games on the lower floor.

Tickets for the party will be 20 cents per person and this will include refreshments.

The purpose of the party is not to make money, but to merely provide worth while entertainment for students who are interested.

The music will be furnished thru a P.A. system and the calling will be done by Ralph Copenhaver.

With Fourteen Advisers . . . Teachers College Starts Freshman Guidance Plan

To help students select schedules and activities which will aid in individual development and training as teachers, a unique program of guidance has been set up by university teachers college under the direction of Dr. Ralph Bedell.

Approximately 200 freshmen enrolled in teachers are affected by the new program. Dr. Bedell will have the aid of 14 advisers plus the Education 30 class.

Investigates Qualifications.
The aim of the advisers is to advise students in the fields in which they wish to teach and to make sure that they have the right personal and academic qualifications for this work.

Good teachers must be able to get along well with other people and for this reason teachers college students are urged to participate in activities. It is also necessary for good teachers to have correct speech habits, so that many students must attend the speech clinic. Good reading and study habits which are essential may be developed in special laboratories.

Supplements Orientation.

This guidance supplements the orientation course acquainting the student with the university. It enables students to understand their own personality, character and aptitudes, it helps them to select a field in which they are best adapted, and to acquaint themselves with the problems of teaching.

The freshman are urged to see their advisers every six weeks and upper classmen may arrange conferences at their own request and convenience.
