Eligible Bachelors Stalk Campus In Search of Women and Votes

Bachelors! . . . On this campus—the University of Nebraska? With the war scare almost every available Joe College is being sought, for there aren't many men, supposedly left on the campus. Yet a few manage to wander about still unattached.

Just because a male is unattached doesn't mean that he is an eligible bachelor. "A bachelor," according to Webster, "is a knight who followed the standards of another, either because of his youth or his having too few vassals of his own; hence, a novice in arms." Maybe so, but according to the girls of the campus, a bachelor is no novice in arms. . . . Especially an eligible one.

He is undoubtedly eligible because of his skill in eluding women who like him because of his charm(?), looks, (probably) and money! Perhaps the elusiveness is part of the fascination.

Now election time has rolled around and the eligible bachelors, or candidates, will have to withdraw from their seclusiveness and make themselves known — they with the help of their fraternity brothers. With reference to seclusiveness—to be a bachelor one would have to stay in the background, or be a playboy. Probably the latter—just another reason for being desired.

Girls, when they come into sight look them over and decide which six are the most desirable, and cast your vote accordingly. Our one chance to be critical without being caught.

To those six who will be "the eligible bachelors" of the campus take heed of this plea. Please dear Mr. Bachelor,—let your personality radiate around the campus so that a girl will have a chance to say she at least saw you, and possibly—that is, if you'll condescend—to say that she dated you. You can't imagine what this would mean to those attending "the future girls' school" . . . The University of Nebraska.

Coeds Revel in Dr. Denton's Pajamas

BY PAT CATLIN.

Brahm's lullaby floats on the chilly blasts that blow in the window as our UN coed turns over her be-curlered head to see if it is time to arise and shine.

This miss doesn't mind getting up in the cold room because she had foresight and bought some Dr. Denton pajamas. The sleepers may not be the most glamorous attire, but who cares since they are equipped with feet, mittens, and a nose warmer?

Regulations Guide Sales.

Government regulations put a stop to adding unnecessary features shown by the new robes. My lady will not lounge in a robe this year that falls to the floor in voluptuous folds, but in one that wraps around in the new shin length.

This does not mean that clipped velvet, quilted satin, and taffeta will not be displayed, for the materials are as fine a quality as ever. Plaid and flowered materials designed on captivating lines make studying a more pleasant experience.

For sleeping wear, outing flannel pajamas and nighties are found to be quite snug on a cold winter night. A few of the clever patterns feature Peter Pan collars edged with ruffles, monograms on the pockets, or appliqued animals.

This wearing apparel may be purchased also in floral patterns or in plain tailored lines. Manufacturers have made up gay cotton prints into comfortable sleeping wear shown in long and short sleeve styles. These pajamas have a dual selling point—they are easily laundered, and they wear like iron.

Lounging pajamas are fast becoming a favorite for study wear. Dressmaker styles cut in gabardine are a welcome possession of any college lass. Most suits boast big pockets for pens, pencils, and even room for apples or candy bars. Cotton milkman suits find themselves at many a study table. These suits provide comfort and practicability as they can be worn on picnics too.

Insomnia should not prevail on our campus with the stores full of clothes designed for more sleeping comfort.

Dormitories Hold Guest Evenings Each Wednesday

Wednesday night is always guest night at the dorms and other organized womens' houses on the campus. On this evening residences of the houses invite boy friends, mothers, fathers, and friends to dine with them.

Honored guest at the dorm last Wednesday was Assistant Dean Elsie Ford Piper. Upon another occasion Dean Verna G. Boyles was the guest of honor.

Visitors' night gives the parents and friends of the girls a chance to see how the girls live and to meet the people with whom they live. It also gives the girls a chance to meet members of the faculty and administrative staff informally.

Luncheon Honors Miss Zimmerman

The physical education staff will honor Miss Dorothy Zimmerman at a luncheon this noon.

Miss Zimmerman has resigned from her position on the university staff and will leave Friday afternoon for overseas work with the armed forces.

She is to be assistant director of a Service club and will be in charge of the management of the entire club. Part of her functions will be supervision direction of recreational programs.
