

Sig Alph Volleyball Team Advances To Final Round

By Gene Sherman.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon's exponents of the volleyball sport became the first team to advance to the I-M volleyball play-offs as the SAE's walloped the Delta Sigs to win the championship of League Two.

Play Is Close.

Nip and tuck races have developed in the other three leagues with the play in League One being the most interesting. At the present time the Phi Psi's, defending champs, are in first place with three wins as compared with a lone setback. Right behind the Phi Psi's are the Beta's and Sig Nu's each with a record of two victories and one defeat. The winner of Beta-Sig Nu game will jump into a tie with the Phi Kappa Psi men for top honors in League Two.

League Three is the only league to boast of two undefeated teams, Sigma Alpha Mu and Alpha Tau Omega. The Sammies are leading the league at present with three wins but the ATO's are right behind with two victories. The ATO's must meet the unpredictable Phi Deltas before meeting the Sammies for the league title.

All the Phi Gams need to take the top spot in League Four is a victory over the last place Beta Sig netmen. If the Beta Sigs upset the Phi's, a two way tie between the Phi Gams and Sig Chi's will exist.

Union to Begin Table Tennis Matches Dec. 2

Newest activity planned by the Union is a ping pong tournament to be held Dec. 2. The tournament will be arranged in such a way that every student who is interested, whether a duffer or an expert, will be matched against persons of similar ability.

Six and possibly seven divisions will be included in the tournament. Those divisions definitely planned for include men's, women's, duffer's, advanced, singles and doubles. If enough people register for the tournament a mixed doubles division will be included in the plans.

Registration for the tournament will be held at the Union check-stand until the day of the tournament.

Horse Sense

A jug is a positive requisite at any Hollywood social fling. So isn't a jug an absolute necessity to the Kansas State grid team, next and last foe of the Nebraska Cornhuskers.

We have full reference to Mike "Jug" Zeleznak, the wiry 170-pound quarterback who is to the Wildcat grid team what Hillenbrand is to Indiana, what Pat is to Mike, and what Mutts is to Jeff. Mr. Zeleznak is the motivating power behind the K-State attack. Fact that an epidemic of injuries has shelved Jug for the majority of the campaign accounts for the mediocre Wildcat record.

With Dale Bradley and Vike Francis functioning at the height of efficiency, the Cornhuskers appeared "walk-away" victors over the Wildcats at the outset of the opening period last year. Score favored Nebraska, 6-0, and Kansas State was strictly on the defense.

Two plays after the second quarter opened, a single feat changed the entire complexion of the tilt. Zeleznak, the Croatian sophomore from Kansas City, lugged the leather 65 yards through the entire Husker team to tie the score. From that point on, Kansas State shifted into high and kept the Huskers backing up during the remainder of the soupy afternoon.

Ten minutes more—pretty aptly filled by Mr. Zeleznak—went by before the Kansans tallied again. Count leaned toward the Wildcats then, 12-6, and thus it remained for the rest of the game. Nebraska could gain only two yards rushing through the Wildcat line during the final two periods.

Riddled with injuries during the fore part of the 1942 campaign, Zeleznak saw brief action during the Indiana massacre before an injured ankle forced him benchward.

No longer do we believe in these pre-game injury sob tales. We swallowed enough sob stories from Mizzou to leave our system with a standing amount of salt. Then those rude Tiger invalids performed like jumping Commandos. Just like one post-game observer said: "If those cripples are crippled, then our cripples must have rigor mortis."

A decisive victory over Kansas would serve two purposes in the Husker scheme of things: 1. Give Nebraska second place in the league title chase. 2. Revenge the 1941 Wildcat triumph.

Once again it's Saturday evening and once again as we sit in our vacant attic, we hear the roar of yon teletype. Top upset of the day occurred down in Columbus where Auburn exploded to top supposedly invincible Georgia, 27-13. Mr. Sinkwich & Co. didn't have the stuff to cope with the spirited Auburn team.

Our teletype fairly jumps with excitement as more upsets roll in . . . Dartmouth 26-Columbia 13, Fordham 20-Missouri 12, Alabama 27-Vanderbilt 7, Creighton 19-Tulsa 33, Wisconsin 20-Minnesota 6, Indiana 20-Purdue 0, Northwestern 20-Notre Dame 27, Great Lakes 6-Illinois 0, Temple 14-Oklahoma 7.

As we blot our cigar and prepare to leave, news of the day's biggest tilt filters in—Ohio State 21, Michigan 7! Mark those Buckeyes down as potential national champs.

Plock Enters Marine School

One of Nebraska's best "scat" backs ever to don the Scarlet in recent years, Marvin Plock, will depart next week for Quantico, Va., where he will enter the U. S. Marines Officers' Training school.

Plock has been in the insurance business in Des Moines for several years and has been working out daily at the stadium in recent weeks to get in top condition before joining up.

A back like Plock many believe would have been the difference between winning and losing a few ball games at Nebraska this fall.
