The Voice of Experience . . .

Senior Women Advise Naive Freshmen On Mortar Board Party Date Technique

For women only!

For the first and last and only time during the year the girls have to invite and fete the boys to an evening's entertainment. Yep, it's the annual Mortar Boards' Black Masque ball that's coming up a week from tomorrow night so get your date all sewed up before the wolves wearing skirts start hunting.

So now the problem is how to ask some lucky boy to the vice versa party. According to the best authorities (seniors, they've had three years experience so know all the angles) there are several satisfactory ways in which to approach a man on the subject of a date.

Perhaps the simplest and most widely used method is to ask him at the ball, for the general practice in the past has been to ask the fellow who asked you to the ball. Just say, "Oh, by the way, don't forget the Mortar Board party next Saturday night. I'll call you and let you know our plans."

Fun to Phone?

But perhaps you feel you should invite him by telephone before the Ball. In that case plan to spend at least three quarters of an hour trying to get in on a fraternity house phone. After you get hold of your chosen lad the rest is easy and you're all set. Of course, you can always wait for the right man to call you then spring it on him all of a sudden like and catch him off guard. You've got the date cinched then.

For those who want to be more ingenious and deliver their invitations in a littel more startling way we have little to suggest. You might send it by carrier pigeon, or throw it on his front porch wrapped around a brick.

But a word of warning. . . . Treat your date sweetly on the night of the Military Ball, that is if you don't want him to remember everything on the night you have to play escort and magnify details a hundred fold.

On Time for Once.

For instance, be on the dot if not ready a few minutes before hand. If he has to wait for you, you'll have to wait 15 minutes for him for every minute you kept him waiting. Don't load him down with too much brickbrack or you will likely end up carrying more stuff than you can find in an infantry man's pack and it'll weigh about that much too.

But no matter what you'll have the time of your life at the Mortar Board party. And so will your date despite his corsage, baby bonnets, and other paraphernalia.

Gone Are the Days . . .

War Curtailment of Women's Hose Introduces Rayon Mesh

. . . And Leg Make-Up

BY JEAN GLOTFELTY.

"Gone for the duration" is the stock phrase these days. And the fairer sex is losing out from top to bottom. First it was curlers and peroxide; then girdles; and now the shapely or otherwise limbs of the college girl have become martyrs to the cause.

There will definitely be no more silk or nylon stockings until the end of the war—and just when we were learning how to keep our nylons up, too.

A few pairs of silk or nylon still may find their way into the stores now and then, but this supply is practically exhausted; in fact, it is exhausted because the salesgirls get there first. Imported English lisle is out, too, except where certain stores have a few pairs on hand.

What to Do?

So what are we supposed to do? The answer is what we were afraid it would be. Rayon, cotton, and more rayon. Fine rayon mesh, coarse rayon mesh, rayon lisle, and just plain rayon. But it can be obtained in any desired shade for a dollar and up for good weaves. Except for the added care necessary in handling rayon stockings serve to catch the male eye as well as silk.

Previously scorned cotton stockings are on the up and up for sport and school wear this year. Fine cottons in a rib or fancy weave can be obtained in many colors from the customary tans to red, green and yellow.

In these brilliant hues, milady's legs will trip merrily about their war work, and snags and runs will be a forgotten evil of "the good old days."

The only alternative to cotton and rayon is leg makeup. And next summer will see a lot of it. When well applied, its golden tan is definitely smooth on the eyes. Helena Rubenstein, Elizabeth Arden, and Debonaire put out a superior brand of this "gam goo." There are also many other less expensive, but good, brands.

WAVES, Beauty Shops, UN Coeds Like Short Hair

These war shortages seem to change a lot of things. For now the great question that most of the coeds are trying to answer is, "Should we leave our tresses long and be glamorous or cut them shore and look trim and efficient?" Many of the girls are doing the latter and snipping their lovely locks.

The idea seems to have originated with the WAACs and WAVES because it is a requirement for them to have their hair one inch above their collars.

Beauty salons report that the great popularity of shorn locks is due chiefly to their ability to make customers look neat. Short hair is also very simple to take care of, which is an important factor in these busy war times.

Signal Corps . . .

various types of special contact work for the Detroit laboratory. Those in experimental radio interference suppression work will supervise crews conducting experiments concerning army vehicles within the laboratory and in the field.

Positions are also offered for women high school graduates between 18 and 30 years old. Applicants must have high school algebra, physics or their equivalent and an interest in radio, passing a personnel interview and aptitude test. These applicants will receive laboratory training to qualify as assistants and crew members in the positions listed above.

If a sufficient number of women indicate interest in these positions the Signal Corps will send a representative to the university to interview applicants. Those interested should call at Dean T. J. Thompson's office and leave information concerning their qualifications.
