last, the pampered ones.

But "Dainty."

Such dainty corsages as recent - sacks - and - shingles, old - shoes - on - cardboard, name - spelled - out - in - flowers, and so on, interfered somewhat with dancing to music provided by Stern Sternberg and his band.

While headgears ranging from cut banana poke-pies to baby bonnets and hunting caps were prevalent, outstanding theme centered around rationing.

Toy tires with gasoline, coffee, sugar, and a "C" gas sticker, helped emphasize the principle thought for the evening, "everything rationed but fun."

Girls in universities and colleges who will complete their courses during the current term may enlist in the women's army auxiliary corps with the privilege of remaining inactive until completion of courses.

Phi Upsilon Omicron, Lists Nine Initiates

Nine women were elected to Phi Upsilon Omicron, national honorary home economics sorority, this past week. They were chosen on a basis of scholarship, leadership, character and promise of service to home economics.

The nine chosen are: Betty Brown, Arlene Casey, Ruth Johnson, Rachael Ann Lock, Marjorie Moore, Frances Kerr, Gwen Row, Rosa Knickrehm and Mary McDermond.

Pan-Hellenic Advisory Board Sponsors Toy Shop Project; Sorority Houses Cooperate

In an all-out war effort program, Pan-Hellenic advisory board sponsors a toy shop project. Every sorority house is dressing dolls which will be given to the Social Welfare agency for distribution.

One doll is being furnished by Pan-Hellenic and each house is donating one doll and is responsible for outfitting them. Kay Hanley is in charge of distribution and collection of dolls.

This is one of the first big projects being sponsored by Pan-Hellenic on this campus for the war effort. If this is successful, no doubt other projects of this kind will be sponsored in the future. All sororities showed a sincere interest in doing this work which automatically releases others for work in the extended war effort.

Weekly sale of war stamps at the University of Wisconsin has averaged more than $700.
