OWI Publishes Occupational Guide for Women's War Jobs

. . . And Volunteer Work

Published by the magazine section of the OWI, a booklet on war jobs for women outlining occupation opportunities for women in all fields is available in the Daily office.

Besides serving in the WAVES, WAACs and like organizations, women may enroll in nurse's training schools and enlist in the army or navy. Medical technologists will be employed by the army on investigation of their qualifications thru the American Red Cross.

In the war industries, women have been successful in chemical production, scientific and surgical instruments, shipbuilding and transportation. Professional and business jobs are more available than before, because of the lack of men workers. Especially in the field of pharmacy is the opportunity greatest.

Women have been especially helpful in the field of volunteer work, such as the OCD and USO organizations. Local AWVS units recruit volunteers for many of these jobs and assist in the training of workers for motor corps and other civilian defense projects.

Two Geography Classes Designed To Stress War

Two courses especially redesigned with emphasis on the war and the military program will be offered by the department of geography next semester, according to Nels A. Bengston, department head.

The first of these is a cartography or map interpretation course, Geography 107. Prof. E. M. Lackey takes up in the course work similar to that which he did in the AEF university in France in World war I.

Geography 164 taught by Bengston will deal with America at war with special attention to problems in relation to the military situation in addition to the regular regional study.

Continue Studies.

As college men flocked to the campuses for the opening of the winter term, many of them uncertain of their future plans, educators generally advised them to go ahead with their studies for the time being regardless of whether they belong to the Enlisted Reserves or are vulnerable to selective service.

Dr. Francis J. Brown, consultant to the American Council on Education, voiced the sentiments of most educators when he advised: "Go back to school and stay there until actually called into military service." He said the council had suggested that institutions refund tuition money to those students called before the end of any academic term and "some schools" are already complying.

Rules Scrapped.

The National Collegiate Athletic association, meanwhile, took steps to insure the continuation of college sports for the duration. At its annual meeting in New York the executive committee urged the Army and Navy to permit their trainees on campus to take part in the regular program of intercollegiate sports. To smooth the way for this, the committee scrapped its one-year residence rule for competition.

James E. Pixlee, chief of physical training for the Army Air Forces, indicated he was in favor of the idea and spoke of the value of college sports in developing qualities of leadership in fliers and toughening them to endure the privations of combat duty.

Yeshiva college reports a record enrollment in United States history, government and related courses dealing with American ideals and traditions.

AWS Aids War Effort, Begins Women's Clinic

To give women information on their part in the war the AWS will hold a war clinic this week, Monday thru Friday in Ellen Smith hall.

Information on all phases of women and the war will be given. The clinic will encourage girls to stay in school to prepare for war work. Board members will conduct conferences with interested girls.

Based on recommendations of a conference of college women and the war held in Chicago this fall, the clinic will tell women of the fields of the WAVES, the WAACs, the SPARS and of business and industry and community services.

The requirements, the pay and other information concerning these fields will be given. Courses and work to qualify for each of these jobs will be explained.

Hours for the clinic are 10:30-3:30, Monday; 9:30-4:30, Tuesday; 11:30-5:30, Wednesday; 8:30-4:30, Thursday; and 8:30-4:30, Friday.
