Still A Game . . .

On Monday, Dec. 14 Lincoln and the state of Nebraska along with nine other states in this area underwent a practice blackout. According to authorities who supervised the blackout, the test was very successful.

Great preparations went into that first test which was planned to the last building in every city. Notices were given several weeks in advance that Dec. 14 would be the date of the blackout.

Nothing could be more perfect than to know when a raid is going to occur several days before it takes place. The people of England would undoubtedly give Buckingham palace if they knew when the Jerry's would fly over London.

Unless Lincoln and the cities in this country have blackouts which are unannounced, the whole civilian defense set-up will prove to be a farce. The university should undergo such drills if the city doesn't so that students will be given an opportunity to react under surprise measures and prove to themselves what they would do in emergency of this kind.

A few unannounced warnings would do more to get the whole population prepared for emergencies of this kind than any measure that could be taken under planned practices.

How about air raid warnings or blackouts which are not announced?

Student Show Gives Second Performance

Enthusiastically received in their first request revue before the junior chamber of commerce yesterday, selected acts of "Red Hot and Blue" will perform a second hour's show at the army air base hospital Monday, Jan. 15. Asked to the base by the local chapters of USO and Red Cross, the war benefit student variety show has provoked the compliments of Lincoln as well as university students who attended the show last Sunday night in the Union, sponsors said. Members of the "Red Hot and Blue" cast who will entertain over 250 soldiers at the base hospital will be notified by postcard this week. They are asked to then get in touch with either Pat Lehr at the Union or with Ronald Metz at the Sigma Chi house if they are unable to come. Transportation to the base will be furnished by the sponsoring city organizations, and the performers will meet at the Union at 6:15 p. m. Monday night. Acts from the show that appeared before the chamber of commerce include Chi Omega Lenore Beck and accompanist Lillian Worley, the Delta Gamma trio, Janet Krause, Jean Swarr, and Pauline Ven Horne, accompanied by sister Jane Baird; Betty Krause and Jeannette Mae Smith, Pi Beta Phi, Alpha Phi Joanne Kinsey, and Theta Jeanne Rotton.
