Sports Whirl
With Bob Miller

Such Goings On—

After a hectic week-end of cage competition within the Big Six with the current league leaders, Kansas Jayhawks, playing three games Saturday night, conference sports head for a temporary dimout in anticipation of final exam weeks . . . KU downed three small schools by substantial margins which will make the Jay record read like the closing chapters of some success story at the season's end . . . The Creighton Bluejays dropped the invading Oklahoma A. & M. team to lead the Missouri Valley schools by head, shoulders and waist.

That Top Spot—

Dick Dunkel, sports forecaster deluxe, rated the Creighton Blues as the number one team in the nation with Kansas second in his last ratings . . . Wyoming is in the top five and Indiana is in there pitching to prove that the midwest has replaced the Atlantic seaboard as the mecca for the nation's cage artist . . . Creighton exhibited the brand of basketball that makes the spectators sit on the edge of their collective seats and gasp . . . Just ask any of the UN boys who traveled to Omaha to watch the Jays perform . . . In their opinion there is one team in the nation and the rest are all in a second class . . . It would be a nice thought if we could match the Jays and the Huskers on a home and home arrangement with the proceeds to be given to the various war funds . . . It's an idea that should provide a talking point on both campuses.

In Fast Company—

Sid Bradley, Husker former, and brother of Dale, the tireless tailback of the past two seasons, is really traveling with the big names . . . Now in the army air corps at the Waco army flying school, Sid is holding down a spot on the cage team along with Sid Hudson, Washington Senators' hurler of renown; Walter Evers, Illinois champ and a Detroit Tigers' ace in the outfield; Herb Nordquist, a Detroit semi-pro cager, and Dick Mace, North Dakota cager . . . Sid played a lot of the roundball sport around Lincoln and was a member of the Husker grid aggregation.

Three Go On—

Glancing over the state sport pages we see that there are but a trio of high school cage crews that can boast an unblemished record . . . Leading the list is Lincoln High, defending champs in state prep circles, as the current titleholders are racing thru all competition in Nebraska and Iowa alike . . . Sharing the circle are Scottsbluff and Falls City, two schools that always have a leader in the state cage circles . . . All of this play leads up to a bang-up state tournament.

Success?—

Success story in reverse??—Ralph King, long-legged timber topper on the Husker cinder squad, who not so long ago was a valued assistant in a local mortuary, is now mixing shakes and fountain concoctions in the Union grill.

Former AAU Stars Will Test Huskers

Two members of the Phillips Oilers, famed A.A.U. cage quint, shown above, are now exhibiting their wares with Lt. Jack Gardner's Olathe Air Base Clippers. On the left is Grady Lewis and the man with the ball is Don Lockard. The Clippers test the Huskers' reflexes on Thursday evening in the coliseum when the two teams mix. The Clippers split with Kansas; lost an overtime match to Oklahoma and twice downed the Tigers of Missouri.

With Iowa; Heinzelman
Leads Husker Scoring

AMES, Ia., Jan. 18.—Bringing scoring punch out of pre-season confinement, the Iowa State Cyclones bore down to pound out a hefty 50-38 cage victory over the visiting Nebraskans here tonight.

Always a tough team to whip on the home floor, the Cyclones proved that they could knock the props out of their bunting-minded mates of the Big Six as they let the Huskers down not too easily.

With Bob Heinzelman connecting with 10 points for the losers there was not much offensive drive maintained as the visitors sent a leather barrage basketward without success. The victory gave Iowa State a tie with Kansas U. with two victories apiece. The loss shoved the Huskers into a second place ranking with two wins against the single defeat.

The Iowa State cage mentor withheld his prize scorer, Rollin Kuebler, because of a "charley-horse," but he did not need him as a trio of his starters turned in neat averages, one of them, Bob

Hayes, dipping the net for 13 markers and the scoring ribbons.
