

Husker-Jay Match Heads Future Card

NORMAN, Okla., Feb. 2—Altho Kansas' first victory in five years over Oklahoma at Norman and Nebraska's ability to win road games with searing last half rallies have been notable developments so far in the Big Six basketball race, there are plenty of thrills ahead for Midland fans in these coming clashes among the leading clubs:

- Feb. 13 (Sat) Kansas at Nebraska.
  - Feb. 15 (Mon.) Oklahoma at Missouri.
  - Feb. 20 (Sat.) Missouri at Nebraska.
  - Feb. 23 (Tues). Nebraska at Kansas.
  - Feb. 26 (Fri.) Oklahoma at Kansas.
  - *March 2 (Tues). Kansas at Missouri.
  - *March 6 (Sat.) Missouri at Oklahoma.
- *Freshmen will be eligible.
Jayhawkers Lead.

Kansas has been the league's sensation so far with her all-victorious sweep thru the east, her feat of establishing a new conference scoring record of 69 points against Missouri and her 48-44 trimming of Oklahoma at Norman, yet both the Jayhawkers and Sooners are not so redoubtable but what either might be defeated any night they drop their guard against a hot-shooting foe.

Dr. F. C. "Phog" Allen's bounding Jayhawkers have been strengthened wonderfully by their two sophomores, Otto Schnellbacher, scoring sensation of Kansas' surge thru the east, and Armand Dixon, the California boy who helped Ray Evans break up the Oklahoma game with a deluge of one-handed goals from far out.

Oklahoma has no sophomores, their all-victorious freshmen team having joined the service almost intact. Particularly do they need Jack Watkins, a 6 foot 2 inch phenom who was a ball-handler and rebounder deluxe. Watkins joined the marines. They could also use Harold Ward and George Logan, all-staters from Tulsa, also in the service.

Clippers Tip Kansas, 42-32

Olathe naval air station Clippers tuned up for their Saturday night tilt with the Nebraska Cornhuskers by taking a 42-32 victory over touted Kansas Wednesday night. Kansas performed without the services of the famed "Iron Men" which constitute the starting Jayhawk five. Charley Black was ill with flu; Otto Schnellbacher with a shoulder bruise; and Armand Dixon, bothered with a charley horse. Phog kept Ray Evans and John Buescher on the sidelines for "rest."

Gaining an early lead, the Olathe team, sparked by Dale Covert, with 11 points, coasted to its second win in four starts against Phog's lads.

JOHN BUESCHER—CENTER

The smoothest ball-handler on the University of Kansas team this season is John Buescher, only senior letterman on the regular squad. Buescher plays "quarterback" or center for the Jayhawks and besides setting up all plays and leading the fast break finds time to average 10 points a game.

Jayhawks Play Cyclone Five Saturday Eve

... Are Worried

LAWRENCE, Kas., Feb. 4.—After a 17 day lay-off from Big Six warfare during which time four service teams were played, the University of Kansas Jayhawkers return to conference opposition by meeting the Iowa State Cyclones in Lawrence Saturday night.

And the Jayhawks will be returning just in time for the Oklahoma Sooners are pressing close on the heels of the Kansas in case the latter make one slip as they procede down the rocky conference trail.

Cyclones First. First object for Coach "Phog" Allen's lads as they attempt to keep their unblemished conference record will be the game Saturday night against Coach Louis Menze and his Iowans. This will be the 29th Big Six game between these two schools with Kansas holding a 21 to 7 edge. All-time records, dating back to 1908, give Kansas an even greater advantage, 55-10.

At the start of this season, Kansas was rated as the outstanding threat to Oklahoma's clear sailing to an undisputed title and Iowa State was doomed for the second division. The Jayhawks have come thru in surprising style to be conference leaders at present.

The Cyclones, starting with a completely green squad, have come along rapidly, even to the extent of leading Oklahoma for 32 minutes of their game in Ames Monday. Sparkplugs of the team have been sophomores, thus making the team sink from high to low in unpredictable fashion.

Horse Sense

By Norris Anderson
(Sports Editor)

Take nothing for granted when you have a date with Phog Allen. That sentiment will serve as theme of the evening when Husker mentor, "Lew" Lewandowski dispenses the last batch of words to his charges one week from Saturday prior to battle with the scourge of Big Six cage circles—Kansas U.

Though there possibly has been less state yard conversation in downtown Lincoln concerning the Husker court squad, the village experts seem agreed that size is the big requisite needed by the Lewandowski lads. Against a tall foe of Oklahoma or Olathe mettle, the Husker squad resembles a middle-size group of prepsters.

Is the Jayhawk as strong as press notices indicate? That question has come before three Big Six foes thus far and the answer remains stationary: yes. Included among the scalps collected by Phog's lads was headpiece of Oklahoma. Considering the ease with which the Sooners manhandled Nebraska, you can grasp the possibility range of a Husker victory over Kansas. A glance back through past Nebraska achievements, especially the triumph over Iowa and the one-point loss to powerful Indiana, stirs hope for an NU win.

Victory over Phog Allen's lads would promote the Husker season from mediocrity to a celebrity ranking. Nothing could be sweeter than knocking off the spouting Dr. Allen on our coliseum maples. Time will tell.

Advocates of that "snow on the roof, fire in the furnace" belief need look no further for a thoroughbred of the species. A squint into Room 201, Coliseum building, will reveal Adolph Lewandowski pouring over statistics.

A glance down at the basketball court thirty minutes later will see the turret-topped Husker mentor scampering through a scrimmage with his proteges. Lew joined Max Young, Les Livingston (Husker alum star), Ken Elson and Wayne Marquiss yesterday on one team. Facing this combine were Fred Cassidy, Owen Knutzen, Bob Heinzelman, Johnny Thompson and Franie Hassler.

A former Husker grid and court star of the late 20's, Lew still retains all his cage zip. He was tossing the pill around with the zest of a kid and the accuracy of a vet. Only deficiency noted was Lew's divergence from the basket, a chore he turns over to his pupils.
