Senior Drill Cadets Begin Enlistments For Reserve

One hundred and fifty senior advanced students began registration yesterday morning for induction into the ERC, according to an announcement of the military department.

Preparatory steps in filling out applications were completed here yesterday, but the major portion of the procedure of induction will be completed at Fort Crook.

"Because all reserves have been officially closed to volunteer enlistments, the induction of the seniors had to be carried on through their local draft boards and then into the reserve," stated Col. J. P. Murphy, PMS&T of the university.

All seniors registering yesterday morning were given a classification of 1-A with their local draft boards to allow them to receive immediate physical examination and other attention in order to place them in the ERC. With this action completed, all advanced course cadets will be placed in the ERC, thus giving the corps a closer knit organization with that of the War Department.

Closer Knit Organization.

Heretofore only the juniors in the advanced corps and volunteers from the basic corps enlisted in the reserve, leaving the seniors untouched in the government's accelerated military policy in the university. The registering process is not a move to place cadets into the armed forces in the near future, but merely to organize the advanced corps cadets more closely together.

Those seniors who were not able to attend yesterday's meeting are to report to the Lincoln Draft Board No. 3, announced the military department. This action should be taken care of immediately to facilitate the remainder of the machinery involved in placement in the reserve.

Dr. Filley Explains Many War Production Problems

"Business as usual" ends when war begins," stated Dr. H. C. Filley. Dr. Filley, professor and written an article entitled "War Production Picture Has Various Aspects" for the University of Nebraska Agricultural Extension Service News.

"Labor and materials used to produce luxuries and comforts when a nation is at peace must be used to produce airplanes, tanks, ships, guns and ammunition when the country is at war," Dr. Filley continued.

War Production.

"Great Britain has undoubtedly converted her life and her industries more nearly to war production than any other one of the United Nations. Two out of every three persons in Britain between the ages of 14 and 65 are working full time in the armed forces, civilian defense or war industry. In most factories the employes work 56 hours per week.

"According to the Federal Reserve board, the physical volume of industrial production in the United States in October was 92

War Council Sponsors Victory Book Campaign

Second University Victory Book Campaign will get under way tomorrow, under the sponsorship of the War Council in cooperation with the national and Lincoln campaigns which are now in progress. The drive will continue until Saturday, Feb. 20.

This year's campaign emphasizes quality in books with quantity a second major feature. Good books, both as to physical condition and readability, are being asked for in this second Victory Book Campaign, rather than any old, worn out books which would be unsuitable for entertaining and educational reading.

Army and Navy Special Services officers responsible for library service have indicated five different types of books in which they feel men in the armed services would be interested.

The first division includes all current best sellers (Book of the Month, Literary Guild and other book club selections) and the more recently published (1930 to date) popular fiction and popular non-fiction.

Adventure and westerns, detective and mystery fiction are described by camp librarians and others as the type of books most sought and most read by the men. They constitute the second division of books requested.

The third group are technical books published since 1935 in fields of mathematics, machine mechanics and design, electricity, radio, photography, aeronautics, navigation, meteorology, chemistry, etc.

The fourth and fifth divisions include funny books, books of jokes, humorous stories, anecdotes, cartoons and pocket books and other
