Liberal Arts Survive War, Prosper in Peace

In an article written for the New York Times magazine section, James Bryant Conant, president of Harvard university states: "Personally, I have not the slightest doubt that the study of liberal arts will not only survive this war but prosper in the days of peace. I cannot imagine that this republic could reject the ardition of liberal arts. For the judicious blending of the study of men and nature is the only sure foundation of a free commonwealth."

Survive this war—yes; prosper in peacetime—yes; prosper during the war—NO!

The traditions of the liberal arts, the "judicious blending of the study of men and nature" are the flowers of our democracy.

From the students of the liberal arts have come America's great thinkers, writers. A tradition so well founded as the American desire for knowledge cannot die during the war.

But the liberal arts, tho it may produce philosophers and writers, does not produce fighters, and it is fighters that the nation needs in time of war.

And so as long as the war continues, the liberal arts will survive by a thread, by the study of women, of men not physically fit for the army, of others who even a war cannot keep from thinking in terms of Plato and Aristotle and Duranty. But they are all few in number. The cream of manhood is in the army, thinking in terms of Hitler and Rommel and MacArthur.

To the continuance of the liberal arts may seem slim during the war, however, the words of Mr. Conant are the words of every educator; the hope of every student: "...the study of liberal arts will not only survive this war but prosper in the days of peace."

Battle Reaches Head

The battle which has been waged for the last few days in the letterip columns of the Daily Nebraskan will come to a head this Friday when faculty members and home ec students will get together to iron things out.

As the dispute stands now, misunderstanding on the part of students concerning the university ruling and ignorance on the part of the home ec department heads concerning the attitude of the students seems to be the source of the difficulties.

The meeting Friday, thus, offers an opportunity for disagreeing parties to understand and to learn and to "restore bliss on ag campus."

AMES, Ia., March 23.—Members of the Iowa State college hardening classes aren't content with just allowing class averages to better national standards in endurance tests—they see to it that every man is above the average.

Tests conducted at the close of the winter quarter showed that every man in the classes was above the national average for four tests in such activities as the pullups and situps.

"The boys know what lies ahead of them and they want to be in shape for it," is the reason offered by college officials in explaining the high standards.

White Space

If our great and good friend Jim Peterson of Kansas," he could take care of that colere were not far away on his "bloody battlefields unniating, letterripping refugee from a thinking cap, Dave Walcott, in his own bumbling way. But since Jim is not here, the task of defending his humor as best it can be falls to us.

What Jim was trying to suggest in his rather witty letter of last week is, that editorials such as Pat Chamberlin's cold-tomato-soup effort on the soldier's great sacrifice for civilization get a fellow so all fired, blushinglly embarrassed that he has to make a few jokes to reassure himself that he is an imposingly important saviour of humanity after all. That Jim should be embarrassed at Miss Chamberlin's editorial, and should make his few jokes to reassure himself that he is still the humble citizen he always thought he was seems to surprise Mr. Walcott. For his sake we can only hope that he will be able to understand how Jim felt when it is his turn to leave, and that good, old David will not be taken in by all of this saviour of humanity drivl.

If Miss Chamberlin is standing by, she may be wondering what kinds of womenfolk, Jim and we want to "stay at home," if Mr. Walcott's Joans of Arc on the Home Front, and her own tearful yet starry-eyed polishers of the silver courage displease us. We can not speak for Jim, but it might help Miss Chamberlin if we told her of some of the womenfolk we are going to remember, when we have been swallowed into the Army. And most of them would blush, if they thought of themselves as Miss Chamberlin's heroic home-stayers.

We are going to remember mother, cooking oatmeal for the rest of the family's 7:30 breakfast; and Miss Chamberlin being her usual quiet, efficient, serious self; and a certain young lady who thinks that Bach and Mozart wrote the best music ever; and another young lady who preferred swing to either Bach or Mozart, and once tried for fifteen minutes to teach us how to dance; and another young lady who shouts a heart-warming, "Well, hi,

All those interested and who should like to be interviewed should be prepared to meet the board in the Temple building and present the following:

- (a) From the university health department, a report of the physical examination taken between this date and the date of the interview, said physical report to be presented to the navy recruiting board in a sealed envelope. Appointments should be made immediately with the health department for such physical examinations.
- (b) Three letters of recommendation from responsible citizens, one being a faculty member.
- (c) Birth certificate bearing the imprint of the state seal.
- (d) Fifty word resume of occupational or military experience in their own handwriting.
- (e) Two photographs (head and shoulders only), one full face and one profile, size 2 1/2 x 2 1/2 inches. The department of visual education, west stadium, will take the two sittings for 75c. This must be taken care of at once.

Back on a short furlough was Corporal GEORGE YETTER, Phi Psi of last year. He has finished a laboratory technician course at Fort Bliss, El Paso, Texas, and will leave tonight for Fresno, California. He and pinmate Pat Fulton have been doing the town for the past few days.

Ensign BILL MARSH, former Union director, was back on the campus with his wife, Maribel Hitchcock Marsh. He is on leave until next week when he will ship out on sea duty for two months.

Mr. Sprague," from a half-block away; and another young lady who calls us "Elmay" and is always poking us in the ribs; and perhaps most important of all, a young lady who mixes her star dust with meadow dust, and who is our most pressing modern problem. Perhaps this digression if far from the point at issue, should Jim Peterson ridicule Miss Chamberlin's editorial, but it may show Miss Chamberlin that Jim and we are sweet sentimentalists at heart, even if we do laugh at her tear-jerking prose.
