

Girls Rush Rush Week; Frat Men Relax Though Most Houses Open

In spite of the dearth of men returning to the campus this fall, most of the fraternities will operate on as full a scale as possible for as long as possible, according to word received from W. C. Harper, assistant dean of student affairs.

Several houses, mostly those located off the campus, have closed their doors for the duration and many of the others have put up room and board signs while army officers have taken up quarters in several fraternities. But with all of this pledging still goes on.

Over on sorority row the story is some different. The largest number of girls to have participated in rushing activities in recent years are going through this year. The total number is 380, according to the figures compiled in the Panhellenic office.

Rush week started Saturday noon with open house and the tours of the houses continued throughout the evening until 10:30 p. m., with time off for supper at the dorm and Sigma Alpha Epsilon house, known as Panhellenic house for this week. Party bids were received at Ellen Smith through Panhellenic on Sunday morning and parties were again resumed Sunday afternoon.

Rush week, streamlined to meet war time restrictions, has been arranged to coincide with registration so parties have been arranged at times when there is no conflict with registration schedules. Parties are simple and uniform with similar refreshments, consisting of non-rationed items, being served at all houses.

Preference luncheons, at which time rushees will receive their pledge ribbons, have been scheduled for Wednesday noon, which is another deviation from the usual procedure of holding it in the evening. This luncheon will conclude rushing activities.

Council gives rush rules.

The fraternity advisors council has set up a group of rules which the fraternities will follow in pledging new men. These rules specify that only men duly registered in the university who are taking recognized college credit courses may pledge. Uniformed men are eligible to pledge if they are registered in the university in regular academic courses. This eliminates the air crew and STAR unit, but includes such men as dental students who are in uniform.

Rushing and pledging activities are suspended from 8:00 p. m., September 15, until noon, September 18, and no actual pledging will take place after 9:00 a. m., September 18. (See GIRLS, Page 3.)

Pint Sized Frosh Crop Completes Routines Of Pre-Registration

DR. G. W. ROSENLOF. . . reports small class.

The 1943 wartime freshman crop, estimated at between 800 and 1,000 students, turned out last week for three busy days of general convocations, meetings with advisors, and examinations which mark the week immediately preceding the beginning of classes.

The freshman registration is about 55 percent of normal. The number of freshman women will be about the same as last year and other years, but the number of men is about one-fourth as large as last year. Dr. G. W. Rosenlof, director of admissions, said recently. There are 25 percent more women than men on the campus.

Thursday morning at 9 o'clock was the first general convocation for all entering students. Dr. Rosenlof presided at the meeting and university pastors, deans, administrative officials and the president of the student council were introduced. After the general meeting, students attended convocations of their respective colleges.

Thursday also marked the beginning of the classification and guidance examinations. The first exam covered reading and college aptitude. Friday's examinations were over mathematics, social studies and natural science. On Saturday morning the English usage examination was given for all freshmen and transfer students.

Cornhusker To Include Freshmen

. . . Pictures

For the first time in the history of the Cornhusker and the university, underclassmen pictures are to be included in the 1944 yearbook. The goal—a picture of every student in the university to be included in the Cornhusker.

Cards will be distributed during registration stating dates for appointments with the photographer. Dates will be according to the alphabet, and a complete list will be published in the Daily in the near future. There will be much less confusion and complication if each student will be careful to have his picture taken during his specified time.

"This is a special greeting to the underclassmen from the Cornhusker," according to Betty Hoff, editor of the Cornhusker. "We hope everybody in the school will be in the book!" She also asked that anyone interested in working on the Cornhusker see her about assisting during registration.

A contest will be conducted among the sororities in which a free Cornhusker will be awarded for speed and efficiency in having photographs taken.
