

Muddling Through

With John C. Bentley

Now I don't like to gripe about things, because I am not the kind that gripes, but there is one little item that really raises the sparse hair on my noggin. In fact, it so infuriates me that I hardly trust myself to say anything about the subject; but since I have gone this far, I am not going to stop.

Eligibility, a touchy subject, ain't what it used to be; in fact, to get right down to brass tacks, THERE IS NO SUCH CREATURE ANY MORE, nor should there be. Universities have abandoned all such ideals and rulings for the duration. Today, ex-professionals, freshmen, girls, and—well, everybody and his great grandfather is playing football without regard to future standing, or past standing. The war has put the ax to all such foolishness, and now colleges who used to frown on any such goings on are only too happy to use pros or freshmen.

It's a great day for collegian football, but it seems that there are certain individuals who just haven't heard of what has been going on. True, a player must keep his present grades at a passing level to participate, but if he has had no grades before, then the whole incident is forgotten. If other colleges are forgetting the book, and expecting professionals, freshmen and just anybody who happens along, then why should an isolated case of an athlete who has only a previous 11 hours be picked out and prosecuted? I think that it is rather an attempt at trying to keep the shining glitter on a record that needs no superficial polish to keep it bright.

My most hearty thanks to all of my thoughtful friends who sent me those many beautiful crying-towels. They were beautiful, but I have no use for them. Nebraska was soundly trounced by Minnesota, and that's all there is to it. I still think that Nebraska is a good team. Not as good as Minnesota or Michigan, or many other big schools that are saturated with naval men, but a good, spirited and game team for the size of its squad. Coach Ad Lewandowski and his boys aren't making any excuses, nor am I, for what has happened and will happen. They are giving their best and that is all that matters. They are a fine bunch of boys and they deserve your support and admiration.

14 Art Displays Scheduled For UN Galleries

Fourteen exhibits are scheduled for the 1943-44 art exhibitions to be held in the Nebraska art galleries at Morrill hall.

The summer work of two staff members, Miss Kady Faulkner and Dwight Kirsch, are featured in the opening exhibition. "Art in Photography" will follow on Oct. 1 and continue until Oct. 15. The "Gift and Purchase Plan," being exhibited in the second floor corridor, will be on display until Oct. 25.

From Oct. 17 to Nov. 5 "Negro Spirituals," the illustrations and watercolors of Allen Crite, will be displayed.

Artists' Guild Show in November.

The Lincoln Artists' guild will present the annual members' exhibition Nov. 7-8 and the Lincoln Camera club will present its annual members' exhibition in December.

Recent purchases of the Nebraska Art association and hall collection will be displayed in December or January. The 54th annual exhibition of contemporary art will be presented by the Nebraska Art association from March 6 to April 3.

The final display will be the annual exhibition of student work from May 14-22.

Dates for other exhibits have not been arranged as yet.

All of these exhibitions are open to the public without charge, except the 54th annual exhibition presented by the Nebraska Art association.

Gallery hours are from 8 to 5:30 daily, 5:30 to 9:30 Tuesday and Thursday evenings and 2 to 6 on Sundays.

Gopher Weight Advantage Smashes Cornhusker Line

ing of the Gophers in the first half. Beaver outbooted the Minnesota boys all afternoon, even tho he had several bad passes from center. The story of the first half can be told in the yardage statistics. Minnesota gained over 350 yards from scrimmage in the first half to Nebraska's 13.

Huskers Flare Up.

The opening of the second half seemed to bring a momentary spark to the Cornhusker squad, and spunked by Ted Kenfield, they began to drive down field after receiving the kickoff. This was the only time so far in the game that the Huskers looked like they might be in the game. Sparked by Kenfield's quarterback sneaks, the Nebraskans drove down to the Minnesota 12 yard line before they could be halted and thrown back. A Minnesota back intercepted a Kenfield pass to end the threat, and on the next play "Red" Williams took the ball and, driving right thru center, went 80 yards to score. By this time things looked hopeless with Minnesota being on the long end of a 40 to 0 score.

Game Livens.

However, the game livened up with Nebraska starting to gain yards and Minnesota starting to fumble. Dr. George Hauser, Minnesota coach, was sending every man on the bench into the game, using all 48 of his substitutes, but the Gophers settled down for two more touchdowns during the ensuing third and fourth periods to make the score 54 to 0.

Bob Trent, Nebraska sub who was almost left at home, then threw a thrill into the crowd by intercepting a Gopher pass and running it to the Minnesota 15 before being stopped. He also made a couple of tackles that kept the Norsemen from scoring more than they did. Here it seemed that Nebraska would surely score, but fumbles and penalties cost them their opportunity. Wilkins, attempting a long and desperate last minute pass, led to an interception by Minnesota and the end of the ball game. The final score, 54 to 0 in favor of Minnesota.

Review Contains History of Old Fort Mitchell

The latest issue of "Nebraska History," a quarterly review published by the Nebraska State Historical society, features a history of Old Fort Mitchell at Scottsbluff. Of special interest also are stories of three Nebraska communities, Nehawka, Peru and Kearney, which were prize essays of the 1941 Native Sons and Daughters contest.

The possibility of having a world language is discussed in the digest of an article "Shall We Have A World Language," by H. G. Wells, and also in a United Press release, "A World Language for Post-War Collaboration."

New Trackmen Bolster Initial Squad Work

Ed Weir's depleted track team boasted of two newcomers this week, as several candidates took their initial workouts.

The new reportees were Ward Dietrich of Columbus and Carroll

Londeu of Lexington, who was crowned the Nebraska state mile champion in last year's state meet. Londeu was a middle distance mainstay on last year's Lexington team.

Only returning letterman on this year's Nebraska track team is Dean Kratz, prominent point getter on last year's Big Six runners-up team. However, it is doubtful whether he will be here for the spring campaign, as he is expecting his call to the army soon.
