

NU Men in Service Receive Daily Nebraskan Bi-monthly

Further plans for sending Daily Nebraskans to UN servicemen were disclosed at the second meeting of War Council yesterday.

The members discussed the possibility of sending Dailies to former Nebraska men who had been called into service. Marjorie Marlette, editor of the Nebraskan, introduced a plan for having a four or eight page paper sent to the service men twice a month.

The Nebraskan will finance the paper consisting of two weeks digest of campus, social and V-Mail news. All advertising and news outside the interests of service men will be cut out.

The first edition will be mailed Monday, Oct. 18. Anyone having names of service men to whom the Nebraskan should be sent are asked to leave them in the Daily Nebraskan office this week.

At the meeting, plans for organizing a separate War Council on Ag campus were also discussed. The ag council would organize war activities, stamp sales and entertainment of the STAR unit on ag campus and would work as a part of the city war council.

In making plans for the three major war drives on the campus, the War Council advocated uniting all three drives into one big campaign. The main drives are for the War Chest, WSSF and Red Cross. Last year each drive was held separately and there were many suggestions from students concerning the unification of these drives. This year these ideas may be acted upon and the quotas raised by each drive last year, will be the same this year and the money obtained in one drive will be divided proportionately between the three organizations, according to the council's suggestion.

Other plans for raising money were suggested by War Council members. Among these, were a Halloween party to be held in the Union ballroom Oct. 30th and a rollerskating party, for which the date has not been set.

YM Opens Lounge To Soldiers, YW Members Entertain

YMCA lounge at the Temple theater will be open to university soldiers with the YWCA members acting as hostesses every Tuesday and Wednesday evenings from 6:30 to 7:30.

The Religious Welfare Council is responsible for the room decorations and furnishings. All faiths represented in the Council contributed to the project as did the city YMCA. The university put in new fixtures and Miss Katy Faulkner of the art department donated wall pictures. Window drapes were made by the ag YW under the chairmanship of Peggy Larson.

Well supplied with tables for writing and reading and comfortable chairs and couches for lounging, this room should prove popular with students and soldiers alike. Gene Floyd will supervise the room.

For entertainment, a ping-pong table, radio, piano and victrola are offered. Papers and magazines are also distributed for visitors' use.

Last night three YW girls acted as hostesses to the soldiers who took advantage of this room. Alicia Coffin was the chaperon and Hazel Stearn, Helen Martin and Barbara Townsend were the hostesses. Tonight the lounge will again be open to university soldiers with Barbara Arnold acting as chaperon and Anne Wellensick, Bonnie Hinrichs and Ghita Hill, the hostesses.

Candy will be sold by the Estes co-op girls with Priscilla Mosely in charge.

Council Postpones Election

Election of student council members has been of necessity postponed until a later date than October 19 as first announced. Lack of registration figures which must be used in apportioning the membership of council among the various colleges and classes has resulted in the postponement.

The judiciary committee of the council will meet this afternoon at 5 in room 313 of the Union, "probably to set a new date for the election," said Jean Cowden, co-chairman of the council. The meeting will be closed to all except members of the committee and Prof. E. W. Lantz, faculty advisor of the council.

Complete registration figures will be available this afternoon, and a list from which the apportionment may be figured will be ready tomorrow afternoon.

Time and place for filings for council membership and the number of vacancies to be filled from each college and class will be announced later in the Daily.

Ask Faculty Leave Daily For Students

Members of the faculty on both city and ag campuses are requested not to take copies of the Daily from the various stations in the buildings, for these copies are for the students and have been paid for by the students at registration.

Faculty members may buy a year's subscription to the Daily for $1.50 and have the paper sent to them thru the campus mail every day of publication.

Dean Clark Writes Article For Biz Ad College Review

John D. Clark, dean of the college of business administration, urged business men throughout the state to interest themselves in the problems of post war adjustment and to prepare to make their views known to governmental officials who will help formulate policies.

Writing in the monthly business review issued by the college, Dean Clark said the most important policies affecting the future development of business will have to be made by the national government. He pointed out that congressmen and other officials at Washington must be convinced that the business men back home have participated in formulating the views that are presented by business spokesmen.

Problems Divided.

Dean Clark also pointed out that post-war problems of Nebraska communities will be divided into two classes. The problems faced by communities with big war enterprises will be quite different to those faced by communities which have experienced no heavy in-rush of workers. "The danger of conflict between these two classes of Nebraska communities makes it especially desirable that the state itself be an active participant in the development of post-war plans," he added.

In concluding, Dean Clark advised that the state must be responsible for many projects which cannot be handled by local communities, but it is equally important that in the representatives of the state there be found a disinterested body ready to resolve the conflicts between communities which are so apt to arise.

Consult Prof. Crawford . . . Professor Publishes Article On Ideas in 'Writers Digest' . . . For 'Divine Spark'

How does one get an idea for writing? Prof. Robert P. Crawford of the university school of journalism tells how in his latest article in the August "Writer's Digest."

Getting an idea requires hard work, and one doesn't rely on the "divine spark," according to Prof. Crawford. Says he, ". . . it is rather an egotistical notion, isn't it, to think that Providence is sending you the divine spark for doing no other worthy task than to write your little piece on 'How to Grow Cabbages?'"

According to Professor Crawford, many technically good stories fail to click because they lack the most important thing of all, the IDEA. Creation of ideas is a process, and creative thought can be taught, as well as medicine or engineering. His formula is relatively simple. Take an idea from which you select or think of one dominant quality. Then change, add to, or subtract from that quality, and you have produced something new.

Professor Crawford has had several articles published and his book, "The Magazine Article," now in its third printing, is an authoritative work on that subject.
