Injury Hampered Huskers Prep

Still somewhat shaky after the aerial "blitz" of last week, Coach Ad Lewandowski spent most of this week working on pass defense. He particularly drilled the Husker backs on covering the flats in anticipation of the Cyclone's Howard Tippee. Tippee, Iowa State star pass thrower, is notoriously dangerous on short spot passing, and Lewandowski is taking no chances on a repeat of last week's aerial barrage.

Lew also has the old injury blues to cope with. Ted Kenfield, starting quarterback, was injured in last week's fracas, and will not be able to make the trip to Ames. Allen Trant, another first string man, was also injured, and will not be able to see action in Saturday's initial conference opener. These injuries should somewhat put the damper on a Husker crew that is not too deep with reserves. Trying to rearrange his lineup, Lewandowski has shifted Clark Beaver to quarter in place of the injured Kenfield and has shifted "Buzz" Hollins to half and moved Hansen in at fullback. Three men were also moved up to the second squad from the third. Galter, who played a bang-up game against Indiana, and Ellyson into the second string backfield, with Goldstein being moved up to guard.

Commenting on last week's play, Lewandowski stated: "We made an awful lot of mistakes, but the boys are beginning to get into the swing of things, and you can bet we aren't going to make the same ones this Saturday. We are going to try our very best to beat the Cyclones." There was a definite gleam in his eye as he said the latter, and the bookies who are giving 12 against Nebraska might get a mild surprise, to say the least.

The Husker roster was bolstered somewhat this week when Earl "Gus" Eager, former Lincoln high standout and son of a former famous Cornhusker football star, reported for practice. Eager had been carrying too many hours previously to take time out for the gridiron, but after shifting schedules managed to find time to don a uniform. However, for the present, he is playing fourth string quarter, but after learning Lewandowski's "T" plays should see much action. As this is Walt Wilkins last game for the Scarlet, Eager turned up just at the right

Passing Tulsa Invade Sooners

NORMAN, Okla., Oct. 14.—Coach Henry Frnka, the Alexander deSerevsky of the football skyways whose successful Tulsa university teams have won 20 of 23 games while brilliantly espousing the theory of "Victory Through Air Power," will bring his Golden Hurricane to Oklahoma City for the first time Saturday night.

Opponent of the gifted Tulsa outfit at 8 p. m. at Taft stadium will be Coach Dewey "Snorter" Luster's Oklahoma Sooners who probably lack the reserves, the pass defense, the weight and the experience to cope with Frnka's splendidly-balanced club but who will give the problem a real country try as they strive to break Tulsa's record of never having lost to an Oklahoma aggregation.

Oklahoma, a light, speedy, aggressive club that played very evenly with Texas last Saturday at Dallas while losing 7-13, will finish up its non-conference schedule with this game and will then face its Big Six conference slate which calls for battles with Kansas State at Manhattan October 23, Iowa State at Norman October 30, Kansas at Norman November 6, Missouri at Columbia November 13 and Nebraska at Lincoln November 27.

Tulsa is touted as even more of an offensive headache than last year when they were ranked No. 1 in the nation in aerial play by the American Football Statistical bureau, hitting 138 of 245 forward passes for an average gain of 233.9 yards per game.

TED KENFIELD.

Injured Husker first string Quarterback Ted Kenfield will not be in suit for the Iowa State game Saturday. He is expected to be ready for the following Saturday, however.

time. Wilkins will leave for the army soon, as will Bob Patton, another first stringer.

Fem Fun

BY JEAN WHEDON.

As all of you who went to the game yesterday discovered, the WAA has been hit by rationing. Apples, coffee, and nothing else, were available for that game. Every effort is being made to get popcorn and peanuts for the next game. Food in any shape or form seems to be very elusive.

Janet Gibson has been elected president of riding club to fill the vacancy created when Pat Shaw did not return to school. The club rides every Saturday morning at the Fair Grounds. Anyone who is interested in joining may do so by contacting the WAA office.

Dorothy Jean Brown was elected chairman of the recreational clubs board on the WAA executive council at the regular council meeting last Thursday. Dorothy Jean is also president of Orchestra for this year.

At last the WAA cabin has been cleaned. Saturday night after the game, the Physical Education Club combined cabin cleaning and an over-night outing in a trek to the WAA cabin. A good time was had by all—'tis said. Now, plan your parties and make your reservations by calling the WAA office.

Intermurals Get Underway

Oct. 14.—War or no war, it has been announced that intramurals will go on. Although badly depleted in manpower, the fraternities have reached an equitable solution, which finds some of the Fraternities banding together and forming one team. Ad Lewandowski and Gordon Ehlers will be in charge of the sports programs.

The intramural season gets off with the Beta House, replenished with Phi Deltas, opening the football tournament against the ATOs. The kickoff will be at 5:00 in Memorial Stadium, and will be immediately followed by the Beta Sig-Phi Gam game. Although only eight fraternities will be represented will be represented by name in the tournament, smaller houses banding in with the larger houses, it is expected to be a hotly contested fray from start to finish.

The first play-off schedule will start on Thursday, Oct. 14 and run until the 28th of October. On the 28th, the championship and consolation matches will be played, and the winners crowned. The points will be run just as in previous years, the winners receiving awards. It is hoped, weather permitting, that another schedule can be worked out at the completion of the present tournament.

The intramural schedule is as follows:

Alcove Book Notes

Hufor, satire, fancy and philosophy are all found in James Thurber's My World and Welcome to It. Most of the stories, essays and sketches included in this book have appeared in the New Yorker previous to the publication of this collection.

Thurber includes a variety of characters in these works, some whom his readers have met in earlier books. There is the woman who found a new mystery angle in Shakespeare's "Macbeth;" the man who in his dreams protected Alexander Hamilton from Aaron Burr, and the big magician league pitcher who was faced with the problem of "How to throw a fair ball to a midget?" For something in light humorous reading this book is recommended.

Science is rushing forward at so rapid a pace that it is difficult for even a scientist to keep up with its achievements. Since so many readers desire information on current scientific and technological advances, they will be glad to learn of a new book by Professor A. M. Low.

In this book, Science Looks Ahead, Professor Low brings together scientific material from the past, reviews of the present, and views into the future. Subjects such as "War planes and their weapons," "Plastic materials," "New developments in medicine," "meteorology," and "flying" are discussed in the book. Those interested in developments of modern day science will be interested in this book.

Cyclones Prep N. U. With Regular Crew

AMES, Iowa, Oct. 14.—Coach Mike Michalske indicated today that he expects the same Iowa State lineup that was used against Kansas to take the field against Nebraska here Saturday.

That means that Stanley Peterson at guard, Carter Kokjer at center, and Harold Ireland at quarterback, newcomers to the starting lineup at Kansas, have retained those berths through this week's practice sessions.

Yesterday Coach Michalske gave the Cyclones three new plays that will be used against the Cornhuskers. He also sent them through a passing drill, with Howard Tippee, Norman Madson and Joe Noble doing most of the throwing.

Nebraska plays an open game, using a man in motion, which makes passes likely at any time. With Tippee and Ted Kenfield in the game Saturday, Coach Michalske predicted considerable use of aerial offense by both teams. Kenfield, in addition, calls the Husker signals and does most of the punting.

Earlier in the week the Cyclone coaching staff put the freshman into T and double wing back formations to give the regulars a look at possible Nebraska plays. The 16 or 18 men who have carried the brunt of the Iowa State play in the first two games spent the major portion of their time this week alternating in first string spots.
