

Muddling Through

With
John C. Bentley

Today, armed with a divining rod, and a fake name and disguise, I nervously approached my desk. I was afraid that my typewriter, chair and other sundry office equipment, would be loaded with Booby Traps, or other equally violent forms of sudden death. However, it seems that dying a quick and sudden death is not a too satisfactory and fit end for one of my caliber.

Let me state, right here and now, that the whole degenerate and incompetent article of last Monday was mine, all mine, and no one else's. It does not, nor was it intended to, express the thoughts or feelings of the students of this university. However, I must ask that you let me make some sort of a defense for myself.

Things of this nature are quite often misunderstood, which is regrettable to say the least, and it is on this point that I shall make my plea. I am sorry that the ASTP boys interpreted my words as they did, because believe me they weren't meant to be taken in that manner. I, as a civilian, am not, or was not suggesting that they have a "horrible," nasty obstacle course. I merely said I am and was, surprised that they did not have one of those "bloody," "ghastly," body breakers down here. I am not advocating that the Army make the soldiers run obstacle courses, and I am sure they need no suggestions from me, as is so vividly portrayed by thought and word, in other parts of this rag.

There is nothing more that I can backfield, which gives "Buzz" Hollins more chances to carry the ball, Nebraska should be on the long end of the score. However, Kansas is fast and tricky, but for me, I'm picking the Huskers.

The team that wins my vote and admiration for the best team in the country, except for the "fightin'" Irish, is little College of the Pacific. Under that grand old man of football, Alonzo Stagg, this small outfit, given a shot in the arm by Navy personnel, has whipped the best of them.

Starting the season, and every game as an under-dog, the COP boys have thrown the book away, sneered at odds, and generally beat h-- out of any and all comers.

If they whip Southern Cal., and they might, they will have earned an undisputed right to the Rose Bowl. They have really earned that right as no other team has ever done, and I would like to see them get the bid this year.

No Panthers

Due to transportation difficulties, the Pitt Panthers will not make the trip here to Lincoln for the Pitt-Husker battle that was supposed to be held Nov. 13. Both schools announced Thursday that the game to be played here at Memorial stadium would require travel which was against the Office of Defense Transportation edicts, and that they wished to conform with those desires.

The Nebraska athletic department announced that refunds will be made to holders of season tickets at the athletic business office in the coliseum the week of the cancelled Pitt game, Nov. 8 to 13, only.

say that has not been said. People do not like me, or obstacle courses, I do not like people, or obstacle courses. Much sadistic pleasure is received from watching others run obstacle courses, and that's all there is to it.

The Cornhuskers are bound to win this game against Kansas on Saturday. They have flashed (momentarily I'll grant you) scoring power at every fray this season, and at times have looked like real ball players. With three games, all defeats, tucked under their belts, they should have gained enough experience and desire to win a game to really get out there and show some stuff.

In running up against the Kansans, the Huskers will meet a team that is more evenly matched with them than any other they have met. The Jayhawkers are small like the Huskers, and also inexperienced.
