Leotards Solve Winter Fuel Rationing Problem

La de da 'tis autumn! And the logical conclusion follows—soon it will be winter. That, of course, brings up the question of how are we going to keep warm—what with fuel rationing and all.

Since the faculty isn't too keen on slacks for campus wear, we have another suggestion. How about leotards? Surely you've heard of them. They've caused more comment than the recent campus election. They fit like a second skin, and they look like—well, that's a matter of opinion.

Types of Leotards.

There are two types of leotards—short or long. They resemble the tights worn by trapeze performers. They have long sleeves and a variety of necklines. Harper's Bazaar suggests a one piece jumper to wear over them, while Mademoiselle favors a short, gathered skirt (don't ask us where they found one).

Leotards come in solid colors or in striped jersey. If you're a conservative radical, a short, plain leotard with a full skirt would be just what you're looking for. However, if you prefer the weird effect try a long striped wool jersey leotard topped by a one piece jumper. It gives the wearer a tiger look.

Well, They're Sensational. If you're the kind of girl who loves to create a sensation, we promise you this is the thing. One word of warning—you've got to have a sense of humor, the courage of a lion, and an agreeable disposition to be happy wearing a leotard. Some people mean what they say about your clothes. Well, anyway, they're warm!

Well, anyway, they're warm!

Well, anyway, they're warm!
