Rumored ASTP Liquidation Denied By War Department

Campus rumors hit a new high over the week end as wild stories of the immediate shutdown of the whole ASTP program were running rampant as the result of a story appearing in the Sunday Chicago Tribune stating that the program was "to be gradually liquidated." By Monday night however, out of the confusion of misleading reports came a War Department announcement that liquidation," although the number of soldier-students assigned to colleges in the program is now being reduced.

being reduced-but may later b. either increased or further reduced

In another statement credited to the Washington bureau of the Chicago Sun, a War Department spokesman was quoted: "There is no plan to liquidate the special-ized training program. It may even be expanded. That depends on the trend of the war. If it is found that more specialists are needed, the program will be expanded to meet the demand. If it is found that soldiers are needed, the program may be cut down But there is no plan to eliminate the program.'

Major Pattison issued a statement to the trainces on Monday calling attention to the AP denial of the rumored liquidation and stated that in the absence of any confirmation of immediate action to be taken by the War Department, the duty of the soldiers lies in continuing their studies. It was further declared yesterday that in all probability any students now diligently engaged in specialized courses would not be released from the program until they have completed their course of study.
