

Scarlet Meet Tiger Team Tomorrow

Huskers Prep Bengal Tilt

Fresh from their 54-47 conquest of Kansas State Tuesday night, Nebraska's Cornhuskers drove through hard practice sessions Wednesday and Thursday in preparation for their tussle with Missouri Saturday night at the Coliseum.

Victory over the Wildcats boosted the Huskers' morale, and the squad showed new spirit as they prepared for the Missourians. Coach Ad Lewandowski stressed defense as he pushed his players thru long scrimmage sessions both Wednesday and Thursday.

Lew expects the Tigers to be a rough foe. The Missourians, doped to finish in the second division, have knocked off the Kansas Jayhawks in conference competition and have a good chance to grab a first division berth in the final conference standings.

Lew Pleased

Lew was highly pleased with the performance of the Scarlet against the K-Staters. The outstanding defensive play of Al Kirilin, newcomer from Northeast High, and the point-getting of Al Artman, Kearney veteran who scored eighteen points, were especially pleasing to Lewandowski. Kirilin, playing his first college game, was working exceptionally well under the basket and gave a boost to the Husker offense by pouring in eleven markers. Artman was looking the best he has this season, breaking up play after play with his ball-hawking and getting behind the Wildcat defense for frequent set-ups.

Their win over the Wildcats boosted the Huskers from the conference cellar, left the K-Staters in sole possession of that lowly spot.

Weir Issues Call For Candidates

With the opening of the indoor season less than three weeks away, Track Coach Ed Weir has issued another call for candidates. Weir reports that the cinder squad must have several more sure point-getters if the Huskers are to make a creditable showing in coming competition.

"Now that finals are over and the new semester has started," said Ed, "I'm hoping for a new crop of men. We are badly in need of new boys to help Kratz, Barker and the other point-makers we now have."

Second Guessing

Harold W. Andersen

Reaching my ears often of late is the suggestion that an all-star team, composed of the top players from the various Army intramural squads on the campus, meet the Lincoln Air Base Raiders in a clash at the Coliseum. The Raiders have been decisively defeating the best teams that each individual military unit on the campus can offer, hence the proposal that the individual units pool their players and throw an all-star team against the powerful Raiders.

The suggestion seems to me to be very logical, for under the present set-up the Raiders can assemble their team from the entire personnel at the Air Base, while any campus military team that faces them uses men from only a single unit. If such stars as Scheer and Fuller of Company B, Dobrer, Lind, and Bortor of Company C, and Harris of the Air Corps training detachment were assembled on an all-star team, they could give "Goose" Tatum and his Air Base mates a real battle.

Because of its obvious merit, such a proposal meets with this department's hearty approval. I hope to see an all-star Army team from this campus clashing with the Raiders sometime before the season ends. (Mabel is all-out for the idea, too, so I don't see how it can miss.)

Coach Lewandowski's Husker cagers were employing the fast-break to excellent advantage against Kansas State at the Coliseum Tuesday night. The Huskers abandoned their customary deliberate, slow moving attack midway in the first half and came from a 6-13 deficit to a 23-16 margin at half time. The Scarlet continued to pour on the speed during the second half and built a 46-22 margin before the Aggies staged their fierce rally in the closing minutes.
