

Friday Nite Brings Problems To Clothes-Minded UN Coeds

With the dawning of Friday and a "late night" comes the cry of "what will I wear," from the lips of "U" co-eds. Immediately lessons dwindle into the background and outfits of all styles, shades, and colors become the main topic of discussion. The debate is on—"Dressy" black dresses with sequin trim top the list for co-ed glamour. A popular addition to every co-ed's wardrobe, they are donned for those "special" week-end occasions.

Trim, dark, casuals prove the "perfect" date dress for an evening of dancing at the Union or Pike. Of course popular fall suits, as always, hold their place in popularity.

Best Foot Forward.

Footwear is indeed the problem of the hour. It seems the day of numerous UN "six footers" is a dream of the past and co-eds come out with a cry of "but I can't wear those, I'll be taller than he." However, they drag out numerous pairs of sandals, pumps, and ancient saddles, and decide upon those black suede pumps or neat brown spectators. As the evening draws to a close, they can be seen peering hopefully over their partner's head at a rapidly dwindling stag-line.

With the longing glance comes a sigh of, "Oh well, maybe I'll hear from Johnny tomorrow!"

The Last Mile.

Grim, disheartened, figures tread painfully up the wide dingy walk. Each foot drags hopelessly. Each forward step comes slower.

Down cast eyes rise a bit. Oh for a little reassurance from one of those melancholy figures! Eyes meet searchingly. Each holds only despair. "Chin up" is the silent cry. Courage mounts and dies.

Silent melancholy forms climb weakly up wide steps, pulling, gasping at the heavy door and stumbling in. Through a narrow hallway they creep, struggling with another door and slipping silently through. Steps quicken, hurrying to the high iron bars, hoping—yet not daring to look. Damp hands grasp the cold bars and frightened eyes peer despairingly in.

Startled passerby's pause, eyes wide with amazement as an ecstatic cry of "My mail box is empty" echo through Raymond hall.

Whew—down slips are "out" at last.
