'It Can't Happen Here,' Or, Coed Goes to Utopia

BY NINA SCOTT.

Feature if you can a sorority house in Utopia . . . snuggled down in a sunny valley is the artfully landscaped structure . . . glistening windows reflect the perpetual sun and gay collegiates reflect . . .

From the outer view are garages for convertibles, station wagons, bicycles, and other conveyances . . . at the left of these is the swimming pool surrounded by tables for bridge and oomphy lounges placed advantageously for rays of Sol . . .

The house proper has the usual living rooms, a sunny dining room to recreate in, and a gravel pit for Gertie . . . comfort and quiet because every room is sound-proof . . .

Upstairs contains the ideal . . . say, for instance, there are 30 girls in the house . . . there are seven suites . . . four members to each . . . in each suite rooms are combined . . . there is a sleeping porch, a sitting room, a dressing room, and oops, a bathroom or whatever such is called in Utopia . . . the first contains four double beds which face a solid wall of doors opening upon the balcony for serenades . . . the sitting room's point of interest is the fireplace in front of which are numerous deep, luxurious davenport and chairs . . . bookcases (empty) line the walls . . . a modern bridge table sits in one corner . . . coming forth from one wall is a revolving contraption resembling a huge chest in which an ice box is housed . . . all kinds of nibbles and tempting things are replaced daily . . . there's a cupboard for utensils and a tiny stove . . . in another corner is a record player, of course, and still in another is dusty minute desk . . .

The dressing room is quite large . . . four dressing tables with the right lighting . . . each wall is a closet featuring built-in drawers, shoe racks, places for hats . . . these are cedar lined and from the outside are solid mirror from ceiling to floor . . .

In the bathroom two square, glass-enclosed bathtubs and two of the same in showers are discovered . . . our lavatories and so forth . . . on each tub is one of those affairs like a tray that rests on the sides of the tub . . . it includes a book rest, place for letter writing materials, ash trays, et cetera . . .

The president and vice-president each have their own suites similar to this, only singular . . . the house mother has her quarters over one garage . . . she reaches the main estate thru an underground tunnel . . . each suite has a private phone onto which calls are switched from the switchboard in the lobby . . .

The basement is the ball room . . . the floor rolls back and surprise! an indoor swimming pool! No hours . . . no sign-in . . . no sign-out . . . no nothin'. Wanna pledge?

Nix and Nays of Femways

There are certain impolite actions which women of college age and college grace should refrain from doing, but which a large number, nevertheless, do.

1. Handbags, when a person is seated at a table, should not be placed on the table, but should be kept beneath the table, in the lap, or beside the seated person.
2. Smoking has become an accepted social occurrence, but it is still improper to walk from car to hotel, from table to dance floor and so forth with a cigarette in the hand.
3. The well-known "table-hopping" is out, as far as women are concerned. If your date is no better trained, you will have to grin and bear his "childless play."
4. Lipstick is for the mouth, not to decorate cups, silverware, and napkins with. Therefore, excessive amounts should not be worn.
5. Flirting with one's own escort is approved all-out campaigning. Hands off other women's interests.
6. Cattiness, in mixed groups, especially, is the height of ill breeding.
