Coeds Sneak Into Bill Swanson's Hotel Bedroom Right Under Nose of AWS; Uninhibited Actors Cavort Through 'Room Service' To Make All Actions Legal

BY ROOMSERVICE BELLHOP.

Spread the word around quiet-like, but don't let on to the AWS board: certain coeds on this campus have been seen going above the second floor of a certain hotel!

S-S-H-H! Off with your head if word leaks out to Dean Boyles, but those very coeds are: Mary Lou Hildenbrand, Arlis Swanson, Margaret Huff, Joyce Viehmeyer, Barbara Jenkins—oh yes, B. J. Holcomb.

That's not all! All have been seen in Bill Swanson's bedroom—up in the Whiteway Hotel, and only two of them were supposed to be there (Holcomb and Jenkins).

Bedlam.

In fact, lucky UN coeds are going above the second floor—way above—they're doing it en masse and on Thursday, Friday, Saturday nights. And there's nothing Dean Boyles can do about it!

These lucky coeds are doing nothing else than attending the University Theater, and the play "ROOM SERVICE," which is laid in a hotelroom on Broadway.

It's touch and go in this Whiteway hotel bedroom of Bill Swanson, Marv Bowhay and Dewey Ganzel are stripped to their underclothes, and eager Bowhay (following the script) is forcibly kept from removing even his scanty shorts. Uninhibited!

"ROOM SERVICE" shows a hectic 72 hours in the Whiteway hotel bedroom of Bill Swanson, who is trying to live on credit and at the same time find a backer with $50,000 lying around loose.

The struggles of Swanson, Marv Bowhay, Dewey Ganzel and Jeff Gass to keep Carl Ziegler from throwing them out of the hotel provide a humorous evening; the most hilarious show the theater has given this year.

"ROOM SERVICE" hasn't one serious moment; it's a scream; it's a riot; it's a laugh-a-minute show; it'll double you up in hysteric laughter; it'll split your little sides. There, that ought to bring you around. Time's a-wastin'—"ROOM SERVICE" opens this Thursday night.

The ten men and two women who play in "ROOM SERVICE" have definite ideas about the play, some of which were printable.

B. J. Holcomb—The near-strip-tease is worth $2.40 plus tax.
