AS I SEE IT

I really feel sorry for the Army and Navy academies, they are both going to have to start from "scratch" this year. Hardly any of their first teammen are back. Biff Jones of West Point says that none of his "first four" backs are back. He's only got All-American Felix Blanchard and Glenn Davis back for two more years. I imagine Ad Lewandowski would like to start from a few of those "SCRATCHES."

A second Army Air Force, area 2, boxing tournament will be held at the Sioux City Air Field on March 29 and 30. All Air Bases in Iowa and Nebraska comprise area 2.

Teams already entered includes our Lincoln Air Base team and on that team is Cpl. Billy Zuke, who almost slugged his way to the Golden Glove heavy weight championship in Chicago. If the rest of the team can match Zuke, we ought to have another Champion team at the base.

R. L. Voltz, Nebraska alum, is attempting to organize a Class A professional baseball team in the midwest after the war. The cities included are possibly, Denver and Pueblo, Colo., Sioux City, Des Moines, Davenport, Waterloo, and Cedar Rapids, Ia.; Omaha and Lincoln, Neb.; St. Joseph, Mo., and Wichita and Topeka, Kansas.

A municipal football and baseball stadium is being planned for Lincoln. If it comes through it will be swell for the proposed baseball team. IF IF IF?

Baseball is rolling into high gear at Iowa State, as the Cyclones have completed their fourth week of practice. The squad will move outside next week, weather permitting, for the first workouts on the diamond.

The Cyclones face the situation of forming a winning combination with only one letter man and two squadmen returning. All the games will be played on weekends without of town teams or simply intra-squad contacts.

day that Shortstop Floyd Baker, obtained from the St. Louis Browns, had been called for an induction re-examination on March 25, in his hometown of Youngstown, Ohio.

Baker had been conceded a chance of edging Cass Mitchell, 1944 holdover, and Dan Reynolds, drafted from Newark at short-stop.

Third Baseman Bill Nagel, purchased from the Milwaukee Brewers, was expected to arrive late Tuesday to boost the White Sox spring roster to the total of twenty.

At Atlantic City, New Jersey, the training camp of the New York Yankees, Allen Rettel, big right-hander with Norfolk last was termed a likely prospect as a starting pitcher. Little Ken Holcombe, up from Newark, has the makings of a relief pitcher according to Joe McCarthy, manager of the Yankees.

When George Stirnweiss arrives, he will replace Don Savage at second, the latter going to third in place of Oscar Grimes, who will play first if Nick Etten does not report, or reports late.

Baseball Is In The Air-Spring Training Starts

Altho its only past the middle of March, there's baseball in the air, and the big leaguers are starting to round into shape at their respective northern training camps. Here are some notes on how the teams are coming along.

At Bloomington Indiana, the home of the University of Indiana, and the training camp of the Cincinnati Reds, an insistent spring shower kept the Reds inside as they launched their third successive spring training stint, with the result that the first days drill was an undercover affair.

There were only twenty players on hand as their manager, Bill McKechnie issued the usual instructions to take it easy. They did.

At Muncie, Indiana, acting manager Spud Davis put the Pittsburgh Pirates thru a stiff batting practice. The drills were conducted in the outfield since the heavy rains had reduced the infield to a mass of gumbo.

Left-hander Fritz Ostermuller telegraphed the club that he would arrive there on either Tuesday or Thursday. Pitcher Max Butcher is also expected to report on Wednesday. Two rookies from Richmond, Va., were in camp. One was a right handed pitcher and the other a very lanky first baseman.

Manager Jimmy Dykes of the White Sox, who are training in Terre Haute, Ind., learned Tues-
