

"Face-Lifting" Effects Change In Law College

In preparation for its reopening January 7, the university law college building is undergoing a complete "face-lifting." The building has been closed for two years due to the war.

A new indirect "daylight" lighting system and a new heating system are being installed throughout the entire building. The third floor law library has been expanded and remodeled to accommodate 15,000 additional volumes and to provide space for seven new offices and research seminars for the new staff members.

The downstairs court room has been remodeled and painted, and three offices have been added to the main floor. One of these offices will be headquarters for the college's new legal clinic. The law school club room has also been remodeled and decorated.

Curtis Ag School Holds Summer Camp for Boys

Initial plans have been announced for an eight week summer camp for boys to be held on the university of agriculture campus at Curtis.

The project is under the direction of the 113th and the 120th Rotary districts of Colorado and Nebraska the university foundation and the Curtis school. One of the aims of the camp will be to give the boys a glimpse of the meaning of agriculture through work in the laboratories and in the fields.

Special Scholarships.

Any boy will be eligible to attend, and members of the Rotary districts plan to award special scholarships. George W. Olinger of Denver is chairman of the scholarship fund. Boys who receive scholarships will have all expenses paid. This will include meals, lodging, recreational and educational features, trips to neighboring ranches, a livestock show, a rodeo and field and sports tournaments.

Formals Return To Campus Fun Get Spotlight

By Phee Mortlock

Flash! Station R-A-G announces the return of the party dress! With houseparties and their formal attire hogging the limelight this week end, we decided to concentrate on formals—this seasons and next—cuz they have been neglected for too long!

This year's playful bustle-back—an eyecatcher if there ever was one—is going to be very popular. Fashioned in brilliant plaid taffeta, your bustle affair will be stiff and rustling and all in all, mighty pretty.

Delicate Pastels, sparkly white favorites

The Empire gown, with its decollete bodice of satin and its net skirt, snatched its name from the modes Empress Eugenie made famous. And hubby Napoleon 3rd paid for! In foamy white, you'll mirror every dream your favorite escort ever had!

A veritable pink bonbon of a gown is the party dress of marquisette, gold-frosted and high-necked. In delicate pastels, the bouffant skirt makes this an ideal dancin' dress. Then there is the sparkly white off-the-shoulder gown for that most formal of weddings. Tight-fitting till about the hip-line, the bodice is crusted with silver and pearls and flares gracefully to your white satin toes.

Ballets inspire fashions

Too pert and stylish to be ignored is the new ballet-inspired evening dress. A sleek black waist accenting the net ballerina skirt is beautiful as well as its companion mode—a sequin studded marquisette skirt, whirling below a slim, cap-sleeved top.

We realize a dinner dress is not quite in the party class—but THIS one is different! A slim column of a gown, dramatically laced up the back, this dinner gown is strikingly different. The black crepe skirt fits snugly and its topping of pink, coral, or fushia is accentuated by the black lacings in back.

Look purty while you party.

Teale, Saenz Edit Book on Gauchos

South American Gauchos, counterparts of American cowboys, are the subject of a book edited by two members of the department of Romance languages, Lloyd D. Teale and Hilario Saenz. The book, to be published in the spring, will be presented against a background of the pampas and an Argentine frontier town.
