

Scarlet Five Drops Tilt To Cyclones

Nebraska lost its third Big Six basketball game Monday night, when they succumbed to the Iowa State quintet by a 57 to 39 count, on the Cyclone court.

Joe Brown led the Husker scorers with 12 points and Bob Korte followed with seven, but the real scoring leader was forward Jim Stark of the Iowa team who dropped 24 points through the nets.

The Huskers were in contention for the first ten minutes, but then the Cyclones pulled away, leading 33 to 17 at the half.

Charles Miller Resumes Post As Gym Coach

Captain Charles Miller of the army air forces will return to the gymnastic helm at the University of Nebraska next semester according to Louis E. Means, Director of Student Welfare.

Capt. Miller, varsity gymnastic coach before his entrance into the service three years ago, is coming back to the university at a substantial increase in salary. Besides handling all gymnastics, Miller will teach several physical education classes and take an active part in the recreational program.

Other Pastures

Wilbur Knight, who is leaving the school for other pastures, did an excellent job in filling Miller's shoes during the latter's absence.

Miller returns to Nebraska with superior recommendations from every field at which he was stationed. He was director of training and operations at Buckingham Field, Florida, and reorganized the entire physical education programs at Scott Field, Illinois, and San Antonio, Texas. He also instructed at Maxwell Field, Alabama and the Lincoln air base.

Miller had been active in organizing high school gymnastics throughout the state, and it is certain he will continue where he left off in that respect. He will study the athletic equipment in the coliseum basement in an effort to provide adequate, up-to-date apparatus for students' use.

HUSKER HIGHLIGHTS

By George Miller

Sports-minded students will get plenty of opportunities to watch Nebraska teams in action in the immediate future.

With the announcement of the track and wrestling schedules, as combined with the present basketball schedule, there will be plenty of indoor sports activity on the campus throughout the month of February.

Nebraska tracksters provide Saturday afternoon entertainment each week in February, as they entertain Big Six foes on the indoor track layout beneath the east stadium, and Jerry Adam's wrestlers show their wares for the home crowds three times during the month.

Add to this action the Nebraska basketball schedule which indicates that South Dakota State, Iowa State, Oklahoma and Missouri will all perform on the coliseum court during the month to come.

With this reawakening of athletic interest, we hope that Nebraska teams in all of these sports will prove to be on a par with the Husker teams of prewar days. Although the days of Nebraska's domination of Big Six athletics are gone, Husker fans have not applauded a conference champion for several seasons in any major sport.

Future prospects, if they can be judged by a comparison of activities at other Big Six schools, seem to be rosy. Only Iowa State has indicated that it will pursue a full-scale indoor sport program, with both wrestling and swimming squads to supplement the track and basketball programs.

Nebraska also will produce a swimming team this season, and Ed Higgenbotham is now at work at the university pool, drilling a promising number of squad candidates.

Another sport which has been re-activated is rifle shooting. Through the extensive ROTC courses, a student rifle team will be selected, and will engage in meets with other schools. ROTC cadets are firing a series of preliminary scores to determine the men best qualified to carry the Husker colors against intercollegiate foes.

be able to catch their breath at the conclusion of this week's play. Throughout their last several games, team members have been bothered by a fiendish schedule arrangement which has kept them on the move much of the time.

For example, this week they returned from their Monday game at Iowa State on Tuesday, and will depart again tomorrow for Columbia and a game with the Missouri Tigers on Friday.

Then comes a week's respite for final examinations. This is followed by home contests with South Dakota State and three Big Six schools. The only road trips are two weekend jaunts to Kansas to meet K-State and Kansas University.

An improved showing in games to come should be the result to this arrangement, as well as a sigh of relief from Coach Pop Klein who has naturally been on the anxious seat when the team leaves for an out-of-town trip, due to the usual worries of a coach when he has a team on the road.
