Tally Shows Union Party Landslides

Students voting for their party preferences Thursday polled 167 for the Student Party and 480 for the Union Independent Party, according to Roberta Collins, head of the Student Council elections committee.

The election committee and one representative from each party counted the votes. Students expressing party preferences will be entitled to nominate and support qualified members of their organizations.

Platform.

Bill Miller, president of the Student Party summarized the party platform as follows: "The Student Party's purpose is, as always, to provide a means whereby individual students, both unaffiliated and affiliated, Ag and city, veteran and nonveteran, can nominate, support and elect candidates of their choice without the domination or dictation of any faction or bloc."

The newly organized Union Independent Party plans to represent all students attending the university who wish to help promote the welfare of the activities of the university by supporting qualified candidates for offices, according to Don Chapin, officer of the new party.

Coslor, Swanson Head Smash Hit

BY ELLIE SWANSON.

Rex Coslor has done it again! After stealing most of "Juno and the Paycock," the master of the dialects has come through with a second triumph.

Thursday night's Temple performance of "Twelfth Night," the Shakespearean comedy which was revamped by Dallas Williams, University Theater director, into 17 scenes, was brought above the level of ordinary college thespic endeavors by the brilliant performance of Coslor as Sir Toby Belch, the inveterate inebriate, Arlis Swanson as the Countess Olivia, and Gay Marr's Festus, the Jester.

In a beautifully costumed and well directed show, Coslor's tippler, Swanson's calm countess and Marr's pseudo-comic philosophy brought continual comment and laughter from the well-filled auditorium.

The prologue brought Bill Swanson's excellent portrayal of Shakespeare, with Lawrence Gilling backing him up as Burbage. As always, Avrum Bondarin turned in a near perfect performance as the narrator.

D. Ann Richardson and Van Westover as the twins, Viola and Sebastian, held up their end of the performance very creditably. Richardson, a freshman, turned in a fine portrayal.

Though much of the Elizabethan dialogue was spoken a bit too rapidly to be readily comprehended, the general effect was much above the average level of classical performance. In a well-balanced cast there were a few standouts, but the general effect was very good, indeed, and little, if any criticism could be spoken.

Barbara Berggren's portrayal of Maria showed the wide stage experience which gave her the necessary background, and Dean Wells and Dean Graunke as Valentine and Malvolio added much to the high standard of the performance.

Dede Meyer's Sir Andrew Aguecheek was easily the most hilarious comedy bit seen on the Temple stage in many a show.

Also included in the cast were Louis Meyer, John Hanly, David Andrews, Louis Meyer, Howard Oliver, Herbert Spense, Bill Fein, Fred Lorenz and Allan Ray.

Inflation Will Not Harm Economy of U.S.—Arndt

—From The Lincoln Journal.
KARL ARNDT.

America's basic economy will not be seriously disturbed by the inflation which has come as an inevitable consequence of paying for the war, declared Prof. Karl M. Arndt, university economist, in his address to the Rotary club of Holdrege Thursday night.

"Over 98 billion in currency has been forced into circulation since Pearl Harbor. This huge sum represents an inflationary bulge which our nation is now struggling to assimilate," Prof. Arndt said. "The question is not when is inflation coming or how can we hold the line against it. It's here. We should worry much more about who is going to pay the bill."

Taxation

Some of the billions spent by the government to stimulate war goods production was paid by bond purchases and taxation, according to Prof. Arndt. He also said that new money, amounting to billions, has not been absorbed by American economy and represents the "hidden cost" of war.

He suggested three ways which will help absorb this new war-born money: Increase in prices, increase in production of goods, and outright cancellation of some of the currency in circulation or exchanging it for bonds.

"Price rises and wage increases can and should be expected since (See INFLATION, page 2.)

Initiate New Kosmet Klub Members

Initiation ceremonies for Kosmet Klub's nine new honorary actives will take place at the Capital hotel tonight. Those to be taken into the organization are: Art Beindorff, Neale Copple, John Dale, Tom Green, Dick Lahr, Harry Nease, Fred Teller, Van Westover and Ken Younger.

President Dick Folda announced that there has been some misunderstanding in regard to filing for the Nebraska Sweetheart and Prince Kosmet. Organized houses and clubs have been asked to present candidates, but anyone on the campus may file their name at the Union in care of the Kosmet Klub. These names must be in by 6:00 tonight.

In order to limit the group of contestants to a workable number, the Mortar Board members and Innocents will eliminate all but eight of the names submitted, said Folda.

RED CROSS SOLICITORS.

All solicitors for the Red Cross drive must turn in their money before noon tomorrow, according to Jan Engle, AUF director.

Money should be turned in to the booth in the Union lobby between 9 and 12 a. m. tomorrow, as the drive ends at that time, Miss Engle stated.

Students List Qualifications For Prospective Chancellor

The majority of 15 students polled by the Daily Nebraskan Thursday, expressed indefinite ideas concerning the choice of a new chancellor but several told of the qualifications they felt a man for the position should have.

"The new chancellor shouldn't be chosen from the University of Nebraska. He should come from a progressive school and his record should show his consideration for student viewpoint," Sally Yoder, a senior in teachers college expressed in regard to qualifications of a new chancellor.

University Connection.

Lee Hering, ROTC from Cheyoygan, Wis., suggested that the chancellor should be a man who has been connected with university students, "he might be someone already connected with the University of Nebraska in that he would then be aware of the university's special problems or he could be chosen from outside so that he would bring some new ideas. There would be advantages to both," Hering stressed.

A man who can see the student point of view and won't just stick to tradition is what we need according to Mary Francis Irwin. "From what I read in the book about General Ike of his brother in Kansas, Milton Eisenhower might fill the requirements," Miss Irwin reasoned.

Qualifications.

Other students stated that they did not feel qualified to make suggestions for a chancellor or for his qualifications. Several stated that it would require some study to enable an ordinary student to make an intelligent choice of a man for chancellor.

Eisenhower from Kansas would be good because he would publicize the university, agreed Priscilla Fowler and Patt Dudgeon. Miss Dudgeon added that in addition Eisenhower "would bring new ideas from another college and would certainly know something of political men."

Satisfactory Chancellor.

A student, who asked that her name not be used, said that a satisfactory chancellor should have many general qualifications. Specifically she added he should be "definitely interested in student welfare and be accessible to students."

"Eisenhower would be good because he would bring new ideas from out of state and keep the university from getting into a rut," is the opinion of Bill Ledbetter, a NROTC student, from Memphis, Tenn.
