

HUSKER HIGHLIGHTS

By George Miller

A glance at the batting averages of the University of Nebraska baseball team after their first two-game series shows that catcher Bill Kinnamon paces the Husker batsmen with an average of .750. Two pitchers, Dick Lebbs and Jim Weiss, have perfect records, but each has been at bat only once.

Included in Kinnamon's three hits in four official appearances at the plate is a home run. The circuit clout came in Friday's game with Colorado which went to the Huskers by a 10 to 0 count. Shortstop Wes Maser and outfielder Truck Williams are next in line with marks of .375, which serve to boost the team average to a respectable .292 level.

Batting averages:

Jim Weiss p	1	0	1	1.000

The Colorado pitching was definitely not top quality, however, so the Husker marks are due for a deflation when Coach Smagacz sends his team against the powerful Unniversity of Minnesota crew this weekend in Minneapolis.

With the facilities of a field-house at their disposal, the Gophers have been working out since early this year, but the weather up north was such that they were unable to play outside until late March.

Nebraska's pitching staff weathered its first test in fine style, and Smagacz gave six different moundsmen a chance to show their wares. Big Jim Sandstedt and Tap Jacob held the Colorado team to three hits in the opener Friday, while Wally Scheef went the first four frames Saturday without giving up a run. Only Lefty Ford Stork got into trouble, and even this was not serious, but the Husker margin was slim and Jacob was rushed in to stem the Colorado rally.

On the defensive side the Nebraska infield showed flashes of real team play, such as the cutoff play on Friday when Bobby Rubino forced the Colorado runner on third base to try for a score after catcher Bill Kinnamon had tossed to second base as a CU runner attempted a steal.

Rubino's throw to Kinnamon cut off the threat and discouraged any wide-open baserunning on the part of the Buffalos.

UN Gridders To Get More Contact Work

With about two and a half weeks of spring practice remaining, Husker football candidates continue to work on the timing and faking necessary for a successful use of the "T" formation.

More Contact Work.

Head Coach Bernie Masterson has indicated that the gridders will have more contact work in the future, altho drills the rest of this week will stick close to the formula of the past few days. Plenty of practice on individual blocking assignments, as well as an increased emphasis on variations of the fundamental "T" plays are on the program.

Masterson hopes to have a scrimmage Saturday afternoon to give his crew of quarterbacks a chance to operate in actual game situations. He has not named any definite lineups for the Saturday session.

Cletus Fischer, St. Edward sparkplug who was improving rapidly at the close of the 1945 season, was in suit, but did not don pads. The elusive halfback was hampered by an attack of boils at the beginning of the spring practice period and has been unable to report for action.

IM Softball Next On Sports Slate; Begins April 22

The last big intramural sport of the year, softball, will get under way the week of April 22. All organizations desiring to compete are asked to file their entries in Room 207 in the Coliseum not later than Thursday, April 18, at 5:00.

Independent and Veterans' Leagues.

The intramural office plans to place all independent and veterans' teams in leagues separate from the fraternities in order to make the final playoffs more representative. Balls, bats, catchers' masks, and score cards will be furnished by the intramural department, but players are required to bring their own gloves. Games will be played daily, starting at 5:10 sharp. They will be seven innings in length, continuing if tied, and regular softball rules will be used.
