We Must Not Fail

The Ivy Day Oration BY BOB GREEN.

I speak today well aware of the pressing problems in world affairs. The war is over, the greatest conflict which man has ever endured. That is history; the problems of our generation are ahead of us. The youth of today constitute the leaders of our nation tomorrow. We of this class have attained our first goal by obtaining an education to better equip ourselves to meet and conquer these problems. It has been our good fortune to attend a great university, a school supported wholeheartedly by the citizens of our state, a state proud of its school and proud of its youth. We thank you for this heritage. It is our hope that we may keep the faith you have entrusted in us.

Unfortunately, many of our original number are not privileged to graduate with us. These men and women have returned from the war and are underclassmen. Far too many will never come back. To those returning, a grateful nation, a grateful state, and a grateful school owe an undying debt—a debt which must not be taken lightly nor quickly forgotten, for theirs is a conflict as great as the hardships they have endured, a conflict of readjustment. This is our first problem. They do not ask favoritism, nor pity, but only the chance of an adequate education, security and a life of happiness. If we give them these things, we will return to them a faith in something deeper and more eternal than themselves. Our vision of a postwar world will be a mockery, unless we provide a place for them. Only then, will their sacrifice not have been in vain.

Let us turn momentarily to the opportunities offered to those returning. The G. I. Bill of Rights, with which we are all acquainted, makes it possible for them to obtain an education with a minimum of financial worry. Whether their chosen field be law, medicine, engineering, agriculture, education or business, all have the opportunity to reach their desired goal and return to their communities, no matter how large or small, and contribute a full measure of effort toward the progress of our nation.

The men and women of our class that have been here the full four years have been faced with the enormous problem of maintaining a semblance of normalcy. We have never faltered in our efforts to preserve the traditions, scholarship and sportsmanship which have always characterized students of the University of Nebraska. We have continued such traditions as Ivy Day, which we are celebrating today. We have studied hard to maintain our high scholastic average, and we have carried on an adequate athletic program, often against almost insurmountable odds. Nebraska athletes have proved themselves true sportsmen in any field of conflict.

In the past four years, we have observed improvements in our school which have greatly benefited us in obtaining our education. Among these are the addition of Carrie Belle Raymond Hall, Love Memorial Library and Love Hall on the campus of the Agricultural College. The future promises even great improvements. The construction of the Armory, the much needed men's dormitories, and the Agriculture extension of the Student Union will further enhance our opportunities and beautify our campus. It is the desire of the class of 1946 to contribute to the improvement of our school in any way possible.

And now we must turn our thoughts and efforts toward our present and future problems—the problems of world peace. Many months ago the leaders of great nations met to take the initial step in the planning of this world of our dreams. The names of these men are familiar to all of us. A year ago this spring, the great statesmen of the world gathered in San Francisco in an effort to make world peace a reality. This was the second step. Today, great strides are being made by the United Nations Organization, made up of large nations, small nations perhaps even impotent nations, but each an entity in its own right. The men that represent these powers realize that throughout the ages civilization has been bedeviled by wars and the destruction wrought by them. They further realize that with the advent of the atomic bomb and other such devastating devices, civilization could not endure if another world conflict were to occur. At last, it seems that light and hope have begun to penetrate the darkness of the past few years. We realize that the world is far from complete and that much is left to be desired. Perhaps we can never reach a Utopia. However, today we face a future of promise, a promise of life undreamed of by our predecessors. Now is the time to prepare. We must justify our every thought and action toward this end. Each of us must actively contribute to building the long road back to a free world, regenerating our country with a new vigor.

We must not, we cannot fail. Today is important, as we

Regents Approves 19 Per Cent Increase in Budget

A budget allowing an increase of 19 percent over the current expenditures was approved Saturday by the Board of Regents, setting the operations figure at $5,305,946 for 1946-47.

The budget for the fiscal year, which begins July 1, represents $2,408,458 in state tax funds; $1,076,948 in cash funds derived from student fees, endowments and reserve; $716,685 in federal funds; and $1,103,853 derived from self-supporting activities and enterprises of the university.

State funds will be received through appropriation by the next session of the legislature.

The Regents approved disbursements of $4,202,093 for instructional and general expenses of operation and maintenance; and re-appropriated the estimated $1,103,853 income from self-supporting activities for the operation of those activities during the next fiscal year.

Budget Revised.

The new budget compared with $4,430,406 approved for operation of the university during the current fiscal year. Excluding income from self-supporting agencies, the budget total derived from state and federal taxes and cash funds next year of $4,202,093 compares with $3,402,636 for the year ending July 1.

The difference in income is due

(1) to an increase in enrollment which doubled income from student fees; and (2) dipping into the university's reserve operating fund for an additional $136,948 with which to meet the deficit in next year's budget.

Income from state taxes received by the university is derived from five major sources: General fund, $2,250,000; Agricultural Extension, $140,000; Agricultural Promotion, $4,500; Agricultural Meetings, $800; and Vocational Education, $13,158—all of which were specifically "earmarked" by the last session of the legislature.

Income from federal funds is derived from 10 different sources, all of them appropriated specifically for agricultural purposes.

Income from these three major sources (state and federal taxes, and cash income (from fees, endowments, and reserve) will be expended in the next fiscal year as follows:

must prepare for tomorrow. None of us can shirk our duty. A few cannot accomplish the feat which lies ahead. It can only be effected by all nations and all men combining every resource to stamp out the roots of distrust and dishonesty between nations.

You may wonder what role the student must play in this pattern. He must learn well the problems of peace, of adjustments to tolerance of religion, of nations and of races. There must be no room in our new world for blind prejudices, prejudices which will as surely cause our downfall as our enemies have been felled by the combined efforts of all nations, all regions and all races. All of these ideals are within our minds, but the power to perpetuate these lies in the insight and sound judgment of our professors. Therefore, we look to them to clarify the meaning of something which until now has been only a dream. In their hands lies the ability to mold the minds of youth as the sculptor molds clay into objects of beauty. Through their efforts they may help us attain the complete world we seek and which the generations to follow will also work toward.

The war has proved to all of us that we are a part of the most powerful nation in the history of mankind. We have proved ourselves to be a brave people, and a capable people. Our tireless efforts and our undying will to maintain our freedom spurred us on to victory. Now we must renew our efforts and work even more untiringly to maintain peace with our freedom.

President Truman, in a recent speech, summarized the aims toward which we must all strive, with the following statement, "We must use all our force and all our resources and all our skills in the great cause of a just and lasting peace!" These words have a deeply significant meaning, for truly we must have an enduring peace. We must not fail!

Victor Borge, Eyebrow, et al, Appears at Coliseum Monday

Victor Borge, Danish musical humorist hailed by critics for his versatility as actor, composer, musician, writer and director, will appear at the coliseum at 8 p. m., May 6.

Borge, who with his wife, fled from Denmark after its invasion, entered the United States in September, 1940. He is the child of a musical family. His father, an eminent violinist, played under the direction of Richard Wagner and was a member of the Beruta quartette in Copenhagen. His mother was a gifted pianist and music teacher.

Royal Tutors.

Tutored by his father's colleges in the Royal Opera in Copenhagen, Borge later received scholarships to the music conservatory in Copenhagen, the University of Berlin, the studies in Denmark and Vienna with Victor Schiöler, Frederick Lamond and Egon Petri.

Assured that his wit was a marketable commodity, Borge went to Hollywood soon after his arrival in this country, and through the efforts of Rudy Vallee, he was given a part on Bing Crosby's variety show in 1941.

In his first motion picture, "Higher and Higher," he was cast as an Englishman. He refused another English part after the re-
