

Student Opinion Poll Shows Majority Favor Drink Revision

In a poll of student opinion on the liquor by the drink question, it was found that only three out of 25 interviewed would vote against the amendment if they were eligible to vote in Tuesday's election.

Among those who are against the amendment are two Lincoln residents. Dick Lahr said, "There are enough private clubs to take care of social drinking. Lincoln is still a small town and there is no reason for it to go big time."

According to Patty King, also of Lincoln, "If we have liquor by the drink people from out of town will come here to drink and the morals of the town will decline so that in a few years it won't be recognized as the same place."

"Too many young people are drinking, and it would be more of a habit to go into a bar and drink than to buy it in the bottle," is the opinion of Bernard Girard.

Evelyn Lukovsky stated that she would vote for liquor by the drink because, in her opinion, there is equally as much liquor going over the counter as there would be if it were sold by the drink. "If liquor were sold by the drink, a lot of unpleasant results would be eliminated as people would not be inclined to buy a bottle and feel they have to 'kill it.'"

Harold Smith said, "We are going to have our liquor regardless of whether we buy it over the bar by the drink or by the fifth, and there would also be a possibility of getting more and better brands."

"By passing this amendment, there would be supervised drinking instead of under-cover drinking," asserted Doris Frahm. "Minors wouldn't be able to do as much drinking and there would be less over-indulgence by everyone."

Normie Williams said, "If liquor were sold by the drink, there would be less liquor consumed than if it were bought by the bottle, because a person feels obligated to finish a bottle before going home."
